NO ROOF SPECTATORS TO SEE DELIGE HANGED

Sheriff Locates Gallows to Escape Gaze of Morbidly Curious.

TAKE BODY TO SCOTIA

After Execution, on Tuesday, Remains of Murderer of Mrs. Baudis Will be Removed to Old Home for Burial—Condemned Negro Prays.

Sheriff Hurley has not only drawn the line on a public execution of Bert Delige, the murderer, next Tuesday, but he has so located the gallows in the jail yard that even though hundreds of morbidly curious persons may climb to the roofs of houses nearby they will be unable to catch so much as a glimpse of the hanging. At the several executions that have taken place at the jail it has been a common practice for hundreds of persons to assemble on the roofs of nearby houses, or climb up telephone and telegraph poles, and thus witness the exection to the same advantage as though they were inside the jail yard. Sheriff Hurley's plans will mean disappointment to those who had planned resorting to this scheme to witness the hanging of Delige.

At executions in the past the gallows were erected at the southeast corner of the jail yard and thus were in full view of persons assembled on the roofs of houses on High Street, along the North side of the jail yard wall. After some planning, Sheriff Hurley found that by erecting the gallows at a certain point in the jail yard the execution could not be witnessed from any elevation outside. The spot selected for the gallows lies between the jail building and the jail yard wall, on the South side, just a short distance outside the Sheriff's office. The hanging will thus be screened from outside view by the jail and the jail yard wall on the two sides, and by the Sheriff's office on the West end. It will be impossible for persons on the outside to witness the hanging from the East end, for the simple reason that there are no houses at that point.

While it is not known just how many persons will witness the execution, it is a settled fact that the number will be limited. They will include Sheriff Hurley, Deputy Sheriff Rees, the Sheriff's jury of twelve, a few County officials and representatives of "The Republican" and other newspapers. The death warrant, signed by the Governor, directs that the execution take place between the hours of 10 o'clock in the morning and 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Delige will be attended by Rev. P. A. Paul, pastor of the African Methodist church. On the morning of his last day alive the condemned man will be allowed to select what will be his last breakfast. This is a custom prevailing throughout the world and will be adhered to on this occasion. On arising on Tuesday morning he will don the new suit of black clothing, recently purchased for him, and in which he will be hanged.

No member of the family of Mrs. John Baudis, for whose murder Delige will be hanged, will be present at the execution. Nor will any member of Delige's family be present. The condemned man some time ago said his final goodbye to his mother, and when she left his cell in the jail it was with the understanding between them that she would not return. It was an affecting parting as the aged mother looked upon her son for the last time and then slowly walked away from the steel bars of his cell door.

With but four days and a few hours to live, Delige spends almost every minute of the hours he is awake in prayer and in reading his Bible. Thus far there has been no indication of his breaking down as the day for his execution approaches. He is calm and composed and apparently is completely resigned to his fate.

After the execution, immediately after the Sheriff's jury pronounces Delige dead and the mandate of the law complied with, the body will be taken in charge and prepared for burial by Samuel S. Osman, an undertaker from Port Matilda. The body will then be removed to Delige's old home, at Scotia, for interment.

Reasner—Watson.

At the United Evangelical parsonage Mr. Dempster B. Reasner, of Bellefonte, and Miss Lida A. Watson, of Snow Shoe, were happily united in marriage on Saturday afternoon by Rev. J. F. Hower. Miss Beulah V. Bryan acted as bridesmaid and Mr. John F. Rhoads was best man. Both of the contracting parties are well known in this vicinity and will be followed with the best wishes of their friends. After the ceremony they drove to the William Burnside farm on Muncy mountain, where everything was in readiness for them to go to housekeeping.

MISS OVERTON HONORED

Unanimously Chosen Vice Regent of Pennsylvania D. A. R.

Miss Helen E. C. Overton, of Bellefonte, was signally honored on Tuesday, by receiving a unanimous election as Vice Regent of the Pennsylvania Daughters of the American Revolution. She was elected at the meeting of the association held at Washington, D. C. The sentiment in her favor was so overwhelming that no other name was presented for the honor.

For a number of years Miss Overton has served as chairman of the Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania chapter. Miss Overton is Regent of the Bellefonte chapter, D. A. R.

Pennsylvania shared liberally in the mention of contributions, as announced in the annual report of the treasurer-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution of the several States. Mention was made of a donation on account of Penn's shield by the Bellefonte chapter.

Announcement was made of the awarding of a prize of $50 and a hand-engraved certificate to Miss Kessler, of State College, for writing the best essay on an historical subject assigned by the Pennsylvania society. The competition for this prize is open to the several women's colleges and co-educational colleges in the State.

Runkle Gets License.

On Tuesday Judge Ellis L. Orvis handed down an opinion in the James Runkle license case at Centre Hall, in which he granted Mr. Runkle license. Something over a year ago through a misunderstanding, Mr. Runkle's attorney filed his application several days too late, and according to the law Judge Orvis was obliged to refuse the license. When the time came for granting licenses this year Mr. Runkle found himself confronted with a remonstrance. Judge Orvis, therefore, failed to give him the license until he had made a proper investigation of the situation In his opinion the Judge takes the position that if there is any place in the county that needs a hotel for the accommodation of the public it is at Centre Hall. He believes that Mr. Runkle is the man to run it because his hotel is one of the best furnished and equipped public houses in the State, especially in towns the size of Centre Hall. Then again Mr. Runkle has valuable property there that would greatly deteriate in value should the license be revoked. This would be an injustice to the man who has so much money tied up in that town.

Had not Mr. Runkle received license he had made up his mind to close the house as he claimed it was a losing proposition to run a public house in Centre Hall without the revenue derived from a license.

Death of Alfred A. Hays.

Alfred A. Hays died suddenly at his late home, in Clark County, Missouri, April 10, last. Mr. Hays was born in Bellefonte, August 14, 1826. His home stood on the site of the property now owned by P. Gray Meek. The Hays property extended to the creek, covering the ground where now is located the Pennsylvania Railroad station, also the Bush and McClain blocks and the office of the "Democratic Watchman." Mr. Hays' father owned and managed a large tannery. About 1850 he went to Snow Shoe to manage a steam tannery, owned by Hays Bros. & Co. In 1859 he went to Missouri, where he, with a brother-in-law, had bought a large tract of prairie land. Here he lived the remainder of his life. Mr. Hays was married in 1856 to Miss Rachel Grier, of Lycoming County, Pa. She died, leaving five children, three of whom are living: one son on the old farm home; a daughter, Mrs. H. C. Bubb, of Williamsport, Pa., and a son in California. In 1868 Mr. Hays was married to Miss Elizabeth Moran, of Bellefonte. She died in 1874, leaving two children: Dr. George S. Hays, of Pittsburg, and Mrs. H. M. Hiller, of Chester, Pa.

Lecture on Conservation.

The Bellefonte chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has quite a treat in store for the people of this community. Dr. Hugh P. Baker, head of the forestry department of the Pennsylvania State College has kindly consented to deliver an address on the "Conservation of Forests", illustrating it with photographs which he took on his recent trip abroad, and also some which have been secured from Washington. Through the generosity of Mr. Clayton Brown, the pictures will be shown at the Scenic, on Friday, April 28, at 4 o'clock P. M. The nominal admission of 5 cents will be charged.

GOV. TENER AND MEMBERS OF LEGISLATURE ATTEND FUNERAL OF LATE J. CALVIN MEYER

A remarkable tribute to the memory of the late Representative J. Calvin Meyer, who died suddenly on Friday night, last, was the presence in Bellefonte for the funeral, on Tuesday afternoon, of Governor Tener and the entire membership of the House in the Legislature. The delegation numbered 220. The distinguished visitors arrived in Bellefonte on a special train of twelve parlor cars and two dining cars, hauled by two engines. Arriving here about one o'clock the visitors, headed by George B. Wills, sergeant-at-arms of the House, carrying the Mace of the House, the supreme authority of that body, and with Governor Tener directly behind, marched in a body, by twos, to the Presbyterian church, where the funeral services were held. Leaving the church they marched to the Union cemetery, where interment was made. At 5 o'clock the visitors departed on the return trip to Harrisburg.

Before going to the church, Governor Tener, Speaker John F. Cox, James F. Woodward, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, of which Mr. Meyer had been a member, and Henry C. Quigley, of this place, visited the Meyer home in an automobile. There the Governor and his colleagues extended their sympathy to the widow and daughter of the deceased and also viewed the remains.

The tribute thus paid the memory of one of Bellefonte's leading citizens, whose death was a shock to the entire community, was without a parallel in the recent history of the Pennsylvania Legislature. Ordinarily it is the custom, upon the death of a member of the Senate or House, to appoint a committee of ten members to attend the funeral and then adjourn the respective body of which he was a member as a tribute of respect. So popular had Mr. Meyer become with his colleagues in the Legislature, however, and so sudden and unlooked for was his death, that a suggestion that the entire House attend his funeral in a body met with instant approval and adjournment for the day was taken, notwithstanding the fact that the Legislature is in the closing weeks of the session and is working day and night to dispose of the mass of bills on hand.

As a mark of respect and in testimony of his appreciation of the work of Mr. Meyer, Governor Tener expressed a desire to accompany the members of the House and attend the funeral. The Governor was accompanied by his secretary, Walter H. Gaither, and several department officials, including Thomas Lynch Montgomery, State Librarian. A number of staff correspondents of city newspapers, including Joseph Mackrell, of the Pittsburg "Chronicle Telegraph," and John R. Ball, of the Pittsburg "Post," also accompanied the Governor.

Impressive as was the tribute paid the memory of Mr. Meyer by his associates at Harrisburg, it was but in keeping with that of the people of Bellefonte. A meeting, at which his memory was eulogized, was held by the Centre County Bar Association in the Court House. From 1 to 3 o'clock, during the time of the funeral, the several business places in town were closed. The funeral was held under the direction of the Constans Commandery Knights Templar, of which the deceased was a member, and was the largest ever held here since that of the late War Governor, Andrew G. Curtin, in 1894. Visiting delegations of friends, irrespective of political affiliation, were present from all sections of the county, as well as from Clearfield, Clinton and other nearby counties.

The services at the Presbyterian church were conducted by Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts, of Wilkinsburg, formerly located here, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, of the Bellefonte Reformed church. Dr. Platts, on learning of the death of Mr. Meyer, hurried to this place especially to aid in conducting the services. Both ministers and also General James A. Beaver paid beautiful tributes to the works and worth of the deceased, the spacious church being thronged to the doors until the close of the services. During the progress of the services the body, reposing in a beautiful casket of black, rested at the foot of the pulpit. Surrounding it and in great profusion were beautiful and elaborate floral designs; tokens of esteem from the Legislature and also friends at home

The passing away of Mr. Meyer came at a moment when it was least expected. Although he had been aware that his system had become weakened and that his condition necessitated extreme care, few persons realized that Mr. Meyer was in anything but good health. He spent last week in the Legislature, at Harrisburg, as usual, returning home on Thursday. On Friday he was at his office greeting friends and attending to legal matters. On Friday evening, after eating a hearty supper, he accompanied his son-in-law, W. Hogue MacIntire, to a meeting of the commandery at the Masonic Temple. There he appeared to be in the best of spirits. Shortly after eleven o'clock he departed for home, accompanied by Mr. MacIntire and William B. Rankin, a neighbor. On walking up the hill, from Linn to Cartin Street, on North Allegheny Street, Mr. Meyer became ill. He explained that he could breathe only with the greatest difficulty. Finally Frank Warfield, who had also attended the commandery meeting, happened along. He suggested that Mr. Meyer be taken into his home. This was attempted, but when the porch was reached Mr. Meyer was so weak that he sat down. He gasped the word "Doctor, Doctor," which told as best he could tell that he wanted a physician. Dr. J. L. Seibert was summoned. When he arrived he saw at once that Mr. Meyer was dying. A moment or two later he was dead. His lungs had become congested. His heart was unable to carry off the rush of blood that filled his lungs and almost before those about him could appreciate his condition he had breathed his last. When word of his death became public on Saturday morning it created a feeling of profound sorrow and regret in the community in which he had made his home for many years.

A preliminary meeting of the Centre County Bar Association was held on Saturday to make arrangements for a memorial meeting on Tuesday morning, which was presided over by Judge Ellis L. Orvis. Judge Orvis spoke feelingly of the passing away of one of the leading citizens and lawyers of the community. Others to pay tribute to the memory of the deceased were D. F. Fortney, William C. Heinle and John Blanchard, representing the Centre County bar; Representatives C. A. Shaffer, of Berwick; Alvin Marvin, of Pike County, and C. V. Johnson, of Media, representing the Legislature; Dr. E. E. Sparks, president of State College, and Singleton Bell, of Clearfield.

The meeting then adopted the following report:

To the Honorable Ellis L. Orvis and the Bar Association of Centre County:

The Committee appointed at a preliminary meeting of this Association, held April 15th, 1911, to draft a minute relative to the death of the Honorable J. Calvin Meyer, a member of this bar, who died very suddenly at 12.30 o'clock Saturday morning, April 15th, 1911, would respectfully submit the following minute, and recommend that it be spread at large upon the records of this Court, and a copy thereof be sent to the family of the deceased.

John Calvin Meyer was born on his father's farm near Aaronsburg, in Haines Township, on January 31st, 1861, and died April 15th, 1911, at Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, being at the time of his death in his fifty-first year. He was the son of the Honorable Jacob G. Meyer and Henrietta Christian Furst Meyer, both of whom are dead.

The first of this family who settled in this State was Henry Meyer, who came from the Palatinate in Germany with his wife and several children and located in Lebanon County. He had a son Christopher, who had a son George, the grandfather of the subject of this memorial. Jacob G. Meyer was born October 16th, 1824, and moved to Haines Township, Centre County, in early manhood, at which time he cleared a farm near Aaronsburg, known as "Pleasant View," on which his son, J. Calvin Meyer, was born, and where he spent his childhood. This family has long been identified prominently with the agricultural and business interests of this county.

In childhood, J. Calvin Meyer attended the public schools of Aaronsburg and later entered the employ of B. F. Philips in a general store at that place, but, having a strong desire to obtain an education, he prepared for college under the tutorship of Prof. D. M. Wolfe, of Penn Hall, and later in 1878 entered the Sophomore Class of Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in June 1881, having been the valedictorian of his class. Even then he had a desire to enter the legal profession and from that time never lost this main purpose in his life.

During intervening years, however, previous to his admission to the Bar, and

SELL LINGLE ARTICLES

Haynes-Thompson Co., Phila. Firm, Agree to Take up Project.

After spending several months in Philadelphia, demonstrating a number of brass spigots, water-cocks, etc., which he designed and on which he holds patents, J. Howard Lingle on Monday sent word home to his son, Raymond, that he had established connections with the firm of Haynes—Thompson Company, 1708 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, and that the firm would take entire charge of the sale of his goods. That this may mean not only good news for Mr. Lingle but for Bellefonte as well is the hope of all who have been observing the development of the several articles which he has invented.

According to Mr. Lingle's letter, the Haynes—Thompson Company will, for the present at least, manufacture the Lingle brass goods in Philadelphia. Later it is Mr. Lingle's intention to have the goods manufactured at the Lingle plant in Bellefonte. The Haynes—Thompson Company will also take charge of the sales of the well known Jenkins steam hammers, invented by the late W. R. Jenkins and for years manufactured at the Jenkins & Lingle foundry.

For the present, as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made, so Mr. Lingle writes home, the Haynes—Thompson Company will have a number of brass and iron specialties, on which they hold patents, manufactured at the Lingle plant here. Just what these articles are Mr. Lingle's letter did not explain. Mr. Lingle is expected home in the near fatnre, at which time more definite news may be had in regard to his plans.

Jonathan Shaffer Dead.

Tuesday morning Jonathan Shaffer died in Lock Haven at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. W. Swope, of general debility. Mr. Saffer was born in Miles township, Centre County, on March 2, 1830, making his age 81 years and 27 days. His early life was spent on a farm in Brush valley but later he became a public school teacher in that section for several years. Sometime thereafter he conducted a general store at Madisonburg. After having disposed of his mercantile interests there he again engaged in tilling the soil on a farm near Lamar. He moved to Lock Haven about 30 years ago where he opened a flour and feed store. This he conducted for a number of years, when he sold and became an agent for Mosher's bottling works in that city. He followed this vocation until six years ago when he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Swope. During his entire life he held to the English Lutheran faith, becoming affiliated with St. John's church many years ago. Deceased leaves to mourn his loss the following children: Mrs. H. W. Swope and Mrs. John Lose, Lock Haven; Mrs. H. D. Cornell, Camden N. J.; Mrs. Charles Sorber, East Germantown, Ind.; Phares Shaffer, Mackeyville; Albert Shaffer, Sarcoxie, Missouri. Two brothers, Samuel, of Rebersburg, and William of Zion, also survive.

Farm House Burned.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock Tuesday morning the dwelling house on the Hale farm, near Fillmore, was destroyed by fire. It was occupied by Dallas Marshall and family, Mr. Marshall doing the farming. He had placed straw and manure around the lower part of the house to keep the things in the cellar from freezing, and it is thought a spark from somewhere came into contact with the straw and started the conflagration. Water and help being scarce the only thing to be done was to try and save the household goods, most of which were taken out in safety. The house was insured.

Horse Goes Through Earth.

On Tuesday Mac Fry, son of Captain W. H. Fry, of Pine Grove Mills, lost his valuable and faithful horse "Tom." He lives on a farm near White Hall, and while plowing in a field the animal suddenly disappeared. He stepped on a thin crust of the earth and went down into a hole twenty feet deep. Strange to say the other horse kept his feet on solid ground and was easily unhitched from the plow. When the horse was taken out of the pit it was found his back was broken. He died about one hour after being extricated.

ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES FOR DRIVING INTO LAKE

COURT TO HEAR CASE

Prosecutor Claims Physical Disability Since His Thrilling Midnight Drive into Mysterious Lake Near Gentzel Farm.

This week Samuel S. Osman, of Port Matilda, through his attorneys W. Harrison Walker and N. B. Spangler, entered a suit for $10,000 against Amos Garbrick, Frank Wian and W. H. Coldron, Supervisors of Spring township, claiming this amount in damages for his thrilling midnight drive into the lake near the Gentzel farm, nearby Bellefonte. The case is scheduled for trial in the second week of May court.

It will be recalled that on March 2nd., 1910, Osman hired a conveyance and started down to see a lady friend, who resides between Zion and Pleasant Gap. On the way he drove into the lake that periodically appears on what is known as the Gentzel farm and covers the public road to depth of from four to six feet. The horse Osman drove was drowned. Osman claims that he stood on the seat of the buggy, in the cold, for two hours before Mr. Kauffman, who lived nearby, came to his rescue.

Osman first claims that it was negligence on the part of the supervisors in not having something there to warn the public of the danger. He also claims that through the exposure he has been physically disabled, and has been a constant sufferer for the last year. He also claims that he has been put to considerable expense in doctor bills and medicines.

Mr. Coldron has since died and Messrs. Gerbrick and Wian have employed Gettig, Bower & Zerby to defend them.

Little Boy Drowned.

William Shadle, a seven-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shadle, of Lock Haven, was drowned in the river on Saturday morning. He and his brother, Harry, aged 12 years, were on a small raft when the unfortunate boy fell off. The swift current drew him toward the break in the dam. The little lad stretched his hands toward heaven as if imploring help and even though he was struggling alone in the swift current, he was seen to come to the surface several times, and finally disappear. The body was recovered.

His Other Self

A Forgery Within the Law

By MARY D. BLAKE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

A man was sitting on the piazza of a summer hotel in Maine when another man came up the steps and, after eying him sharply, advanced toward him and said:

"Mr. Pierson, I believe."

"You have the advantage of me, sir."

"I have seen you several times and have been introduced to you. Are you not Richard Pierson of Chicago?"

"If you will excuse me, sir, I prefer not to tell you who I am until I learn something about yourself. Doubtless you are perfectly honest and sincere in taking me for an acquaintance, but you must admit that such methods are so often taken with a sinister motive that it behooves us to be on our guard on the advances of a stranger."

"You are perfectly right. I am Mark Anderson and have often been in Chicago. There I have met Mr. Richard Pierson. If you are not he you resemble him sufficiently to be his twin brother."

"I confess," replied the other, softening, "that I have often been taken for this man Pierson. I wish that I could say that I am he, for I understand he has a fortune. When were you in Chicago, sir?"

Anderson told him that he had left Chicago but a few weeks ago, adding:

"If you are not Richard Pierson of Chicago will you now kindly tell me who you are?"

"Lovering is my name—Alexander Lovering."

Mr. Anderson, while he carefully refrained from appearing to court Mr. Lovering, lost no opportunity of putting himself in his way. Lovering at first appeared to be trying to avoid the man, but gradually gave way and suffered himself to become intimate with his new acquaintance. Finally Anderson mentioned a certain young widow—a Mrs. Markland. Lovering pricked up his ears.

"The man you resemble," said Anderson, "was at one time attentive to her."

Lovering winced.

One morning the two men were in the writing room of the hotel. Lovering was writing a letter. He had finished and addressed it and was beginning another when he was called away, leaving the addressed letter on the table at which he had written it. When he returned Anderson said to him:

"Do you know that your handwriting is very like that of the man I mistook you for?"

"How do you know that?" asked Lovering.

"I could not help seeing the address on the letter you left on the table when you went out."

"Are you familiar with this man—what's his name?"

"Pierson."

"Pierson's handwriting?"

"Yes."

"How did you become so?"

"Well, the fact is that Pierson was a suitor for the hand of a woman I know."

"And she showed you his letters?"

"She did once."

"Did she consider that honorable?"

"Well, the truth is I had heard things about Pierson, and, the lady being my friend, I thought it my duty to tell her. She showed me a letter to convince me that I was mistaken, but I convinced her at last."

Lovering did not seem to take enough interest in the matter to follow it further.

"I wonder," said Anderson, "if your signature is as much like Pierson's as your handwriting is."

"We're not of the same name."

"Write his name, Richard G. Pierson."

Lovering wrote the name and showed it to Anderson, who studied it carefully. "I think I have a note from Pierson," he said. "I'll get it and compare the two signatures."

Going to his room, he returned with the note. It simply informed Mr. Anderson that a certain request of his could not be granted.

"Not even an expert," said Anderson, "could tell the signatures apart."

He looked up at Lovering and found Lovering looking at him with a changed, a cunning, expression.

"Let's drop this fencing," said the latter. "I understand what you are up to."

"Well?"

"I'm your man, but I won't have anything to do with the matter except the penmanship."

"You mean"—

"I'll write the check. You'll have to do the rest."

"You tumble too easily. I'm afraid of you."

"Nothing risked, nothing gained."

"What amount do you propose to go for?"

"What do you propose? This is your suggestion. I suppose you have figured on getting funds out of this man before and are posted on what he will stand."

This was true. Anderson had figured on getting funds from Pierson and knew where he kept his bank account and what was his credit. It was agreed between the two men that Lovering should draw a check for $25,000 on a certain bank in New York where Anderson knew Pierson kept an average balance of $50,000 he used for margins on stock operations. The rascals were to go to New York together to perpetrate the swindle. One thing Lovering insisted on, to which Anderson demurred—Lovering claimed that since he would do the forging he alone would be guilty. Anderson could throw the whole burden on him. Lovering also changed his mind about the method of drawing the money. Resembling Pierson so closely, he would need no identification at the bank. He could present the check with certainty that it would be paid without question. He therefore required Anderson to write him a proposition to get $25,000 out of Pierson by forging his name and personating him. Lovering refused to proceed with the matter until Anderson gave him this paper, and Anderson finally consented.

The conspirators parted to meet in New York on a certain day in September. Anderson went first, in order to investigate Pierson's bank account with a view to determining if it would stand a draft upon it such as was meditated. Anderson wished to defer the execution of the paper Lovering required till the time of drawing the money, but Lovering refused to go to New York at all without the paper in his possession. He succeeded in convincing his pal that a proposition to perpetrate a fraud was not in the eye of the law the same as perpetrating a fraud. Indeed, there was a great difference. This removed Anderson's objections so far as to induce him to sign the paper.

When the day appointed came round Anderson and Lovering met in the lobby of a New York hotel.

"Well," said Lovering, "what do you know?"

"I know that a certain lady on whom Pierson has long been sweet is in the city. Therefore it is probable that Pierson himself is not far off, though he's not so thick with her as he was"—

"You mean since you broke up the intimacy between them?"

"Well, that's about it."

"How could you, a crook, prejudice a lady against a gentleman?"

"I've never been in a scheme like this before. I belong to a good family."

"Well, never mind your family. What have you found out about Pierson's bank balance?"

"He had over $70,000 in bank yesterday."

"How did you find it out?"

"I'm in with one of the bookkeepers."

"Ah! You are! Well, did you get one of the bank's blank checks?"

"Yes. Here it is."

He produced his pocketbook and took out several blank checks. "The only risk," he said, "is this—Pierson's checks have printed numbers on them. The teller may notice this is not numbered."

"I'll fix that by calling for one of the bank's checks and signing it right there before him."

"Good! I never thought of that. Then you can pay me my share, and he'll think you drew the money for a special purpose."

The same afternoon the two men entered the bank where Pierson kept his account. Lovering went to the paying teller's window and said:

"Goodwin, give me a blank check. I want some money."

"All right, Mr. Pierson." And he handed the bit of paper through the window.

Lovering took it to a shelf where were writing materials and wrote the check and signed it with as firm a hand as if he were drawing his own money.

"You're a cool one," said Anderson, who was trembling like a leaf.

Lovering presented the check and asked for the money in $500 bills. The two men waited till the sum was counted, then received it through the teller's window.

As they left the bank Anderson drew a long breath. "You did that splendidly," he said. "How could you keep your nerve?"

"An honest man's nerve is never strained by his conscience," replied the other. "I drew my own money."

"What do you mean?" asked Anderson, starting.

"I am Richard Pierson, the man whom your lying tongue separated from Virginia Markland. You needn't shiver; you are in no danger. I have simply got you down in black and white that you are a swindler. How you ever fooled a lady of Mrs. Markland's good sense is a mystery to me, though I admit you are as plausible a rascal as I ever met. Now go before I kick you down these steps."

Anderson lost no time in obeying the order, and Pierson, re-entering the bank, deposited the money he had drawn.

That evening he sent a card up to Virginia Markland, who was staying at one of the uptown hotels. On it was written, "I have an explanation to make." He met the lady in her parlor, but was coldly received.

"It is only recently," he said, "that by accident I have discovered who poisoned you against me. I confess that I am astonished at your having listened to a man who should be in state prison."

"To whom do you refer?"

"Edward Anderson."

"Mr. Anderson is a gentleman."

"If you think so read this."

He drew the contract by which he and Anderson were to obtain money by forgery. Then he told the story of how he acquired it.

The lady admitted that without this written evidence she would not have believed that one she had long honored with her friendship could be a common swindler. She asked forgiveness and was forgiven.

A Study in Discipline.

The following article was clipped from a paper known as the Primary Education. It should be read by the parents in Centre County. It shows what our teachers in the public schools have to contend with in trying to get the child to become obedient.

One would hardly expect to learn how to bring up children on a shopping trip, but as a method of learning "how not to bring up children" it beats a Mother's Convention.

I received my first lesson in the course while waiting for the car. As our particular station is in the suburbs, we reach the tracks by descending a flight of stairs which are protected by railing. A mother and her boy were waiting for the car, too, and the boy was beguiling the time by sliding down the railing.

"Don't do that, Arthur," said his mother, as the boy slid down for about the fifth time.

The boy went to the top and started again; the mother went on talking to friends and paid no further attention to him. He kept on sliding until the car came.

Did she really want him to stop? If so, why did't she see to it that he did stop? Didn't she really care? Then why did she tell him to stop? Would he be apt to mind her after that when the matter was of greater importance?

I was still puzzling over these questions in the car when I heard the voice of a woman just opposite me saying, "Sit down, Harry." I looked across. Harry didn't sit down. He was a mite of a fellow about four years old, and he was standing up in a seat in front of his mother.

"Sit down, Harry!" she said again. "You'll fall."

Harry still stood up in the seat.

"Well," said his mother, "if you fall off the seat, I won't pick you up. I'll just let you stay there." And she turned and looked out the window and Harry continued to stand in the seat.

By this time I had grown quite interested in my lessons in child training. Of course the child did'nt believe her. He knew well enough that if he fell she would pick him up; and he had gained his own point besides. He had found out, if he had not found it out before—that he did not have to mind unless he wanted to.

I had quite forgotten Harry in the trouble both the clerks and I were having in matching a difficult shade of woolen goods and silk, when a third lesson in what seemed to be my "topic for the day" was thrust upon me.

In this case it was Carrie who had thrown herself flat on the floor regardless of the passing crowds in the aisles and was screaming lustily.

"Look here!" exclaimed her mother, dragging her up by her arm, and giving her a shake, "If you don't behave, I'll leave you here in the store and you'll have to come home alone."

Does that mother expect her child to believe her, and to have regard, herself, for the truth?

I came home that morning thoroughly convinced that what is needed in this country is a training school for prospective mothers, and that attendance should be compulsory.

In the course of my journeying I hear many mothers criticising the public schools. "Miss Jennings is so cross to the children." "Miss Jennings does show such partiality." "Miss Jennings positively refused to 'pass' Annie, though all the other girls passed." "Miss Jennings had the temerity to advise me to whip Johnnie. Just think of that."

And when I hear these things I wondon how many Harrys and Arthurs and Carries, with their previous six years' home training, Miss Jennings has among her forty-odd pupils - and I feel sorry for Miss Jennings.

Prisoners Whitewash Jail.

Warden Mathias A. Seitzer, of the Lycoming county jail, has evolved and put into execution a plan that might well be followed by jail keepers in neighboring counties. The warden has put the prisoners to work whitewashing the interior of the jail. Most of the men behind the bars volunteered to put on lime and to do other things toward brightening up the gloomy building which none of them like, but which some, for the life of them, cannot keep away from.

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

FIRST WOMAN MAYOR

Mrs. Ella Wilson Now Has Full Control of Hunnewell, Kan.

The first woman in the country to be selected chief of police of a municipality is Mrs. Rosa Osburn, Mrs. Ella Wilson, mayor of Hunnewell, Kansas, on Thursday announced positively she will appoint Mrs. Osbur to head the police force and to be held responsible for the enforcement of law

When the ballots were counted April 3, it was found that Mrs. Wilson and O. M. Akers, the postmaster, each had 24 votes for mayor and a tie was declared. But the men of Hunnewell are gallant. Akers was not given a chance to withdraw his name in favor of his fair opponent, he was simply counted out by the election commissioners.

Hunnewell never had seen such rejoicing.

They are still wearing "merry widow" hats in Hunnewell, which is so close to the southern state line that its name bisects an Oklahoma county on the map, and in less than it takes to spin this narrative the air was filled with hundreds of the big head gears. Women who had been married for more than five years were seen to kiss their "hubbies" in the open street in the excess of their joy at the returns.

Mrs. Wilson promptly gave an oyster supper.

In a speech made on this occasion, Mrs. Wilson said:

"If there is one thing which I am more proud of than the manner in which the women of this city stood by me in the hard campaign which I have just concluded successfully, it is the attitude of these gallant gentlemen who saw in my election not merely the elevation of one of the so-called down-trodden sex, but a hope for better times and cleaner government. I shall repay them for their confidence by making Hunnewell a place for good people to live in.

"During my administration I will not forget that posterity has rights that we are bound to respect, and that we owe something to the children we have brought into this world. Therefore, I shall enforce the municipal ordinances regulating pool halls and other places of public amusement, and the state law which prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors.

"I want to say, right here and now, that any policeman who allows liquor to be sold on his beat with his knowledge will be fired on the spot, and he needn't come to me with the big and helpless family story, either. The big and helpless family we must give our first and best attention to is the city.

"And, about these little quiet games on the side - oh, well, I'm not saying much about them just now. Wait and see what I shall do later."

The new mayor admitted that the failure of her police judge, Mrs. George Osborn, to win a place in the administration by a scant margin would tie her hands somewhat. "But what of that?" she asked. "I know that the man who is elected will not controvert the right even if it is represented by a woman. Anyway we will not brook interference with our plan to clean up the town."

Must Not Dig up the Past.

Local attorneys are much interested in the Act of Assembly approved by Governor Tener which makes quite a change in the privileges accorded persons charged with criminal offenses, when on the witness stand in their own defense.

The act provides that hereafter any person charged with any crime and called as a witness in his own behalf shall not be asked, and if asked, shall not be required to answer any question tending to show that he had committed, or been charged with or been convicted of any offense other than the one wherewith he shall then be charged.

This act is intended to forestall the efforts of police officers and detectives through the agency of what has come to be known as the "third degree," by not permitting any evidence of former crimes to be brought to the attention of juries and thus prejudice them and lead to conviction on what may be regarded as general principles, because of a bad record. It has been the invariable custom of prosecuting attorneys when they know the person indicted had a criminal record, to bring it out when the defendant was on the witness stand, but the practice will now be discontinued.

It is regarded as another safe-guard thrown around those who may be charged with the commission of crime.

HOMES DESTROYED.

Tornadoes Sweep Through the West Killing and Injuring Many People.

Tornadoes which swept parts of Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas and Arkansas late Thursday afternoon and night are known to have killed twenty-five persons, injured more than one hundred, rendered more than five hundred homeless, and to have done thousands of dollars worth of damage to property. Of the dead only twelve have been identified. The first tornado was reported at Eskridge, Kansas, twenty-five miles south of Topeka, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Here many houses were destroyed and much damage done to crops. Hiawatha and Manville, Kansas, were struck and here three persons were killed and much property damage done. At 8 o'clock at night a tornado struck Lawrence, Kansas, killing two persons, injuring twelve and doing damage estimated at $175,000.

An hour after the first tornado struck Eskridge, Kansas, at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon a tornado swept through Oklahoma, parts of Arkansas and South west Missouri. Big Heart, Okla., having a population of about one thousand persons was the first town struck. Here the storm came suddenly, tearing down houses about the heads of the people. Many rushed into the streets, only to be knocked down by flying debris and others to their death. At Big Heart four hundred persons are homeless and the work of rescuing the dead and injured from the wreckage was carried on by the light of lanterns. Throughout the entire territory covered by the tornadoes Thursday great damage was done to crops and it is probable that the total loss caused will not be known for several days.

At Lawrence, Kansas, the local company of militia was drilling and did not know there was a storm until the roof had been taken off their building, and as the last of them dashed out of the front door the second floor fell in. A side of the county jail was torn down and about thirty prisoners made a dash for liberty, but only three succeeded in escaping.

At Joplin, Mo., a man was picked up by the wind and carried the length of a block and then dropped in the doorway of a large office building. He was badly injured.

A fireman on a train at Eskridge, Kansas, was picked up out of his cab, carried across the street and there dropped. In Lawrence a small house was carried about a block and then dropped into a tree, where it remains firmly lodged.

Woman Marries at 83.

Mrs. E. Elizabeth Smith, aged 83 years, one of the wealthiest and best known women of Louisville, and Carl Neumeyer, aged 30, a graduate of Harvard, member of a well known southern family and employed as a government gauger in a Louisville distillery, were married Friday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Smith's nephew, Elmer Heasley, at Pittsburg.

Mrs. Smith was accompanied to that city by Detective Captain J. K. Kirnerney in the dual capacity of friend and bodyguard.

He got the evidence that released Mrs. Smith from her third husband Ulysses Baumgartner, a well known man of Louisville, about six months ago, and following which she showed her gratitude by handing Kitnerney a mere trifle amounting to $25,000. Mrs. Smith's first husband was a Count Maxon, a foreigner, who died fifteen years ago. Her second was W. K. Smith, a very successful insurance agent, one of the wealthy men of the south, who died seven years ago.

Mrs. Smith owns several large business blocks in Louisville. Recently she donated $10,000 to the Louisville Y. M. C. A.

Beware of the Stranger.

A stranger recently made his appearance at the residence of a gentleman living near Danville. The lady of the house has not been well for some weeks. The stranger said he was a representative of the health department; that the government had heard of the lady's case from a Danville physician and was about to undertake her cure. Two experts would be sent to see her at once. Everything was to be free except a preliminary fee of $5, which was to be paid the stranger for his visit. The gentleman and his wife were reluctant to part with so much money to a stranger and declined to pay. The sum demanded was rapidly reduced to $3 and then to $1, which increased suspicion. And so the chap went without his fee. The Danville physician had never heard of him, of course. The whole thing was highly absurd.

Guard the Girls.

The Cameron County Press says that in the suicide of the fifteen-year old girl who fled from her home at Chester, Pa., with a married man, and being tracked by the police, did the deed of desperation rather than submit to the mortification of returning home, is found the usual sequel. It is impossible to characterize the man, married and having a child, who deluded the young girl, taking from her the weak defenses of her sex and robbing her of all that should be the cherished possession of a young woman. A mere child, unversed in the ways of the world—albeit the world is too good in its way to be guaged by its worst products—she was without the experience and the maturity of judgment to properly analyze the feelings that appeared to her to be sentiments of an altruistic devotion.

The fatal infatuations of young girls, mere school children like this one, is often chargeable to almost criminal negligence upon the part of a parent. A weak mother, taking pride in the physical attractions of her daughter, permits her to receive attentions that should not be tolerated. They have no right to suppose that the attentions of married men when made direct and personal are harmless. They have no right to permit a daughter's unfolding sentiment to be subject to attack by men who frequently are masters in the art of ensnaring young girls.

The absolute need for protection and warning from parents is indicated afresh in this case. It shows the folly of negligence in this regard and the danger of even passive attentions to a daughter by a man who could not possibly offer her the love of one who has the right to make an honorable suit. Certainly, girls of the tender age of the one who took her life in an Alexandria hotel should not be permitted to receive attention from anyone. The psychology of the emotions of youth show that the sentiments engendered at such an age are wholly unreliable, and that they seldom afford the basis for a lasting affection such as alone can bring permanent happiness in the wedded life. So that young girls should not be subjected to influences that tend to unduly develop their sentimental natures and cloud their views as to matters of essential moment in the serious matter of receiving attentions from the other sex. The ever sad sequel to a mispaced emotional alliance should have its warning for all parents of young girls, whether or not these show romantic leanings.

Dix Gets a Little Lamb.

Governor Dix, of New York—like Mary—has a little lamb.

An expressman sauntered into the executive chamber several days ago and told the governor's secretary that he had a package for the chief executive.

"Bring it up," said the secretary.

The driver hesitated.

"Perhaps," he ventured, "it wouldn't be the proper thing to bring here."

"Why not?" demanded the secretary.

"It it alive," observed the expressman.

"Alive! What do you mean?" queried the secretary.

The expressman then explained that the package contained a lamb consigned to the governor. The surprised secretary, upon investigation, learned that the lamb had been forwarded by a Newburg farmer, an admirer of the governor. No explanation accompanied it.

Governor Dix was consulted and the lamb was sent back to the express office. The governor ordered it to be cared for until he decides what shall be done with it.

"I guess we'll have to get a list of abandoned farms from the agricultural department and farm out our lambs," he said.

Panama Canal Ready in 1913.

Representative James R. Knowland of California, a member of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, which has jurisdiction of legislation over the Panama canal, has returned to Washington D. C., from a trip of inspection of the big ditch and is enthusiastic over its progress.

"Two years ago when I visited the canal there was not a pound of cement laid for the locks," said Mr. Knowland. "Now those locks at Gatun and Pedro Miguil are 50 per cent. completed and the lock at Mira Flores is about 12 per cent. completed.

"Col. Goethals told me that the canal would be open the latter part of 1913, when ships will be passed through, but the official opening will not be until January 1, 1915. It will take a year to true up the locks and train the men in the handling of the machinery.

"Everything is going on satisfactorily in the canal zone. There is no dissatisfaction among the workmen. Col. Goethals is a man of wonderful executive ability. I believe no other man could have handled the situation as he has. His conduct has justified the government in putting a military man in charge of the canal."

The Mule.

There is an old tradition that the mule is an ignorant clumsy animal. Just how such an impression secured root in the minds of the people is not known. It is known, however, that if you desire to show the depth of comparision and depth of ignorance of those around you, you are likely to say—"He is as dumb as a mule" and then you think you have set the pace and all will so regard him. Yet it would be much more appropriate it in making a comparision with bright and educated people you would say "He is as bright as a mule" it should be regarded as a compliment and not as a slur, because the mule is the smartest of all our dumb animals except the elephant and neither of them gets much credit for either beauty or shrewdness. The mule has a peculiar instinct, far seeing and cunning. It is true that sometimes he uses his heels in a way that would not invite the warmest feeling for him, but if analyzed nine times out of ten the mule kicked because he was being imposed upon and was sharp enough to know that he was being imposed upon while some old long haired horse would never have caught the inspiration of active conduct in self defense. If you will study the mule with his many environments and his sensitive nature, see where he places his sense and wisdom, you will find him the most progressive of all in point of intelligence and when you apply the common phrase "As dumb as a mule" to your associate you do an injustice to the mule unless the person compared has more than average intelligence and then and then only should the mule not feel insulted.

One Conductor Helped Back to Work.

Mr. Winford Adams is his name, and he writes: "I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism and used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect. The third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." It clears the blood of uric acid. A Drunkard Defined.

John B. Stoner, formerly proprietor of the European hotel, DuBois, has been in the hotel busines at Parker for some time. At the last license court in Armstrong county, all of the licenses from the town were contested, and Judge Patton, after due deliberation, refused all of them. His definition of a man of intemperate habits is interesting, as follows:

1st—The man not of strong mind who is made foolish or silly by drink and is frequently seen publicly on the street in that condition.

2nd—The good workman or mechanic who attends to his business and supports his family well for a few weeks, and then goes off on a perodical debauch.

3rd The man who has become a steady drinker; whose eyes and face and clothes denote that he is on the downward path, and the community notes that he is neglecting his business and family for drink.

The law prohibits the sale to such parties. Their habits are pronounced, and they are known to every hotel and every business man. It is a mistake to suppose that it is only those persons who are entirely neglecting their families, and who have given up all work, and who spend their entire time in drinking or in prison, that are within the prohibited class.

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhestatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch.

500 Miles of Carpet.

Carpet enough to lay a width the entire length of the main line of the New York Central from New York to Buffalo, thence to Niagara Falls and across the Niagara River into Canada. This is the stupendous shipment that left New York, Thursday, in a special train over half a mile long, made up of 60 freight cars, through from New York to San Francisco via the New Central and Michigan Central Railroads and connections. It is the product of the Alexander Smith & Sons' Carpet Works, Yonkers, N. Y., and is the largest and most valuable single shipment ever made in this or any other country. The weight of the carpet is $1,000,000 lbs. It goes to supply the ever increasing demand on the Pacific Coast. Such a shipment even a decade ago would have been beyond the imagination of the most optimistic weaver, and is tangible evidence of the remarkable growth of the carpet weaving industry in America.

To make this carpet required the labor of 8,000 workers for eight days, an equivalent of one day's work for 64,000 operatives, and if it were piled up in rolls one on top another over an area of 400 square feet it would over-top the Singer Building tower.

The Woes of Democracy.

By orders of the postal authorities the postmaster of Harrisburg is impounding all the mail addressed to the democratic state central committee. This action grew out of a dispute which began soon after the democratic reorganization committee opened offices here where the democratic state headquarters has been located for many years. Such mail as can be, will be returned to the senders and the rest will go to the dead letter office.

WOMEN HELPED

By Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for Kidneys and Liver.

Disorders of women are the result of general bodily weakness. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a strength builder and for women it has proved of great value. Thousands testify to this. A sick woman almost always has kidney trouble, which causes pain in the back, headache, nervousness and other distressing symptoms. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helps the Kidneys and Liver to act properly, purifies the blood and gently moves the bowels, striking at the cause of Kidney, Liver, Blood and Bladder troubles. For over 35 years it has enjoyed steady and merited success, for it is an honest remedy and has stood the test of time. Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y. for a free sample bottle and valuable medical booklet. Large bottle $1.00 at all druggists.

In Favor of Woman.

The onward march of militant woman is sweeping away the right of mere man. The judges of the courts have issued some startling decrees, for instance a judge in the west says that unless a man has minded the baby, got the breakfast before going to his work and has carried all the water and coal necessary and has given to his wife the pay envelope with the exception of the tobacco bill on Saturday, he has no cause to complain.

FUNERAL OF J. C. MEYER

while pursuing his studies, he taught school. His capabilities as a teacher were recognized by his election in August 1881 as Assistant Principal of the public schools of Bellefonte, and in 1883, upon the establishment of the Bellefonte High School, by his being chosen Principal thereof; and the first class was graduated under his charge in June 1884.

During this time he had been reading law under the preceptorship of the law firm of Alexander & Bower, and at the end of the school year, 1884, he resigned his position as Principal of the High School, and, having completed his course of legal study, was admitted to the Bar on December 24th, 1884, and immediately began the practice of his profession in connection with Honorable Adam Hoy, a former President Judge of this Court.

His position at the Bar was soon recognized and in November, 1886, he was elected District Attorney of this County and again in 1889 was elected to the same office, serving two terms in a manner that throughout reflected the highest credit upon him. During his incumbency of this office, he was called upon to represent the Commonwealth in the trial of five important homicide cases, all of which resulted in conviction of the defendants and in two cases in verdicts of murder in the first degree.

By family association and by conviction he was a Democrat in politics and took an active and prominent part in the counsels of his party. In 1894, he received the unanimous support of the Democratic party in this County for the State Senate, at which time, the nomination, however, fell to Clearfield County. He also showed his interest in municipal affairs and in 1893 was elected Burgess of Bellefonte on the Democratic ticket, overcoming a large adverse majority. He served his party as Chairman of the Democratic County Committee and has also acted as the representative of his party at various conventions.

In 1908, he was chosen a member of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, for Centre County, being the only Democrat elected in the County in that year. His force and ability were quickly recognized by his fellow members of the Legislature and his counsel and influence at once became potent. His constituents realized that they had a representative of the first rank, and at the succeeding election in 1910 he was re-elected to the same office without any opposition, being the nominee of both the Democratic and Republican parties. In both sessions of the Legislature he served upon some of the most important committees of the House, always discharging his duties in an enlightened and effective manner, with an eye single to the welfare of the Commonwealth and of the District which he represented. His work was especially noteworthy as regards the charitable and educational interests of the Commonwealth, as well as of this County. This is particularly exemplified in the very efficient service rendered by him in furthering the maintenance and growth of the Pennsylvania State College and of the hospitals of this vicinity. Cut down in full manhood, as he has been, in the midst of this very important work, these interests have suffered a grave and perhaps an irreparable loss.

In 1887 he married Miss Lizzie S. McCalmont who survives him with their only daughter, Edna E., lately married to Professor Walter H. MacIntire, of the Pennsylvania State College.

In his early life he was a member of the Reformed Church but in later years joined the Presbyterian Church of which his wife is also a member.

He was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Masonic Fraternity and was a Knight Templar. He had recently also become a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

As a lawyer, Mr. Meyer was a very successful practitioner and throughout his professional career had the full confidence of his large clientage. He was a very able trial lawyer, especially before a jury. His faculty to see the human side of a case gave him great strength in this regard and he never lost sight of this very important feature either in preparation or in actual trial. At the counsel table he was alert and resourceful not only in the presentation of his case as he had previously conceived it, but also in moulding his case to meet the actual exigencies of trial. He had a pleasing presence, a fine command of language, aptness in the choice of words to express his thoughts, and earnestness, forcefulness and persuasiveness in their presentation. All of these qualities combined in making him a strong advocate and a formidable opponent. He was well grounded in the principles of the law and in all matters of counsel and practice rendered to his clients the services of a fully equipped and efficient lawyer. Of a kindly and genial disposition, he was fair and straight-forward in his dealings with his fellow members of the Bar and amply fulfilled all his duties both to the Court and to his clients.

The citizens of Centre County, without regard to party, recognize that in Mr. Meyer's death the County and the State have lost a representative whose public career has redounded not only to his own credit but to the credit of his entire constituency, and that if he lived his influence and force in public life would have widened and become more and more efficient and useful. His death creates a loss that will long be felt throughout the County and State.

The Bar joins with the public in mourning this great loss; and in expressing heart-felt sympathy with his afflicted family.

Mr. Meyer was prominently connected with the Masonic and the I. O. O. F., lodges, and his name had recently been accepted by the Bellefonte lodge of Elks, but on account of his continued absence from town on the regular meeting nights he had not been initiated. He was prominently connected with the Bickford brick works at Curwensville and for years held the position of secretary of the Centre—Clinton Business Men's Association which holds its annual picnic at Hecla Park. He was always very active in making these annual outings a success. He belonged to the Bellefonte Reformed church, although for years both Mr. and Mrs. Meyer sung in the Presbyterian church choir, and when away he was greatly missed. In 1887 he was married to Miss Lizzie S. McCalmont, daughter of James McCalmont, who survives with one daughter, Mrs. Walter Hogue MacIntire, of State College. He is also survived by a step-mother, Mrs. Lidia Meyer, of Aaronsburg, and a brother and sister, William T. Meyer, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Luther E. Stover of Aaronsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh N. Crider went to Tyrone yesterday for the wedding there last night of Miss Madge Sholly.

NOTICE TO
Owners of Dogs!

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
State Livestock Sanitary Board.

REGULATION RALATING TO DOGS IN

Osceola Borough and that part of Decatur Township, Clearfield Co., within the following boundaries: From junction of Shimel Run and Moshannon Creek, along Moshannon Creek to mouth of Coal Run, along Coal Run to Drane Road, thence east along Drane Road to Shimel Run along Shimel Run to Moshannon Creek; also that part of Rush Township, Centre Co., within the following boundaries: From Moshannon Creek at Boynton Station, along public road to Tyrone Turn Pike, along Tyrone Turn Pike to and including Sandy Ridge, thence along Osceola and Tyrone Road through and including Powelton and continuing along Osceola and Tyrone Road to Moshannon Creek, along Moshannon Creek to Boynton Station.

The attention of all owners of dogs in the above described district is called to the following order of quarantine of dogs adopted by the State Livestock Sanitary Board, April 5th, 1911. Dog owners are warned that disregard of this notice may lead to the destruction of their dogs and that they themselves may be proceeded against legally.

C. J. MARSHALL,
Harrisburg, Pa., April 5, 1911. State Veterinarian.

WHEREAS, There is reason to believe that the disease known as rabies or hydrophobia exists in Osceola Borough and that part of Decatur Township, Clearfield Co., within the following boundaries: From junction of Shimel Run and Moshannon Creek, along Moshannon Creek to mouth of Coal Run, along Coal Run to Drane Road, thence east along Drane Road to Shimel Run, along Shimel Run to Moshannon Creek; also that part of Rush Township, Centre Co., within the following boundaries: From Moshannon Creek at Boynton Station, along public road to Tyrone Turn Pike, along Tyrone Turn Pike to and including Sandy Ridge, thence along Osceola and Tyrone Road through and including Powelton and continuing along Osceola and Tyrone Road to Moshannon Creek, along Moshannon Creek to Boynton Station.

and the nature of this disease is such that for the present all dogs, within certain limits must be suspected of being capable of spreading it.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, by authority of the State Livestock Sanitary Board under the provisions of the Act of March 27th, 1903, that all dogs in the above described district are hereby declared to be in a state of quarantine, and must be strictly confined or firmly secured on the premises of their owners and not allowed to run at large or enter public highways excepting when led or when muzzled with a well fitting muzzle that will effectually prevent biting.

This quarantine shall remain in force for 90 days from the date hereof or until removed by the State Livestock Sanitary Board.

Attention is called to the following Sections of the above mentioned Act.

Section 3. Should dogs be permitted to run at large, or to escape from restraint or confinement, or to go without muzzle, in violation of the quarantine, or regulation, or order, established by the State Livestock Sanitary Board to restrict the spread of rabies or hydrophobia, as provided by this act, such dogs may be secured and confined, or they may be shot or otherwise destroyed, and the owner or owners thereof shall have no claim against the person so doing.

Section 4. Any person violating the provisions of this act or of a quarantine, or of a regulation or order to restrain, confine or muzzle dogs, duly established by the State Livestock Sanitary Board for the purpose of restricting the spread of rabies, or hydrophobia, in the manner provided in the other section of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and upon conviction shall forfeit and pay a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, at the discretion of the court.

MANY TROUT CAUGHT

Hundreds of Sprecked Beauties Landed on Opening Day of Season.

While it wasn't natural to expect enough to go around—there simply couldn't have been enough—the opening of the trout season, on Saturday, resulted in the greatest catch of trout ever witnessed in this section of the State. Hundreds of trout were caught and, judged by the tails that were seen and the tales that were told, as many more got away. Even so, it was a great day for the fishermen and one that afforded the town folk about as much amusement as usually attends a three-ring circus.

From the stroke of the midnight hour, on Friday night, until the coming of Sunday morning, twenty-four hours later, the several streams in and nearby Bellefonte were lined with men and boys, all eagerly anxious to land the spreckled beauties. From noon on Friday until late that night visiting parties arrived from distant points and joined the throng of home talent who had for weeks been anxiously waiting for the opening of the season. Newspaper yarns in the city dailies, to the effect that the trout here were diseased, failed to ward off the expectant throng. An all-day rain on Friday failed to dampen the ardor of the army of Isaak Waltons. Scores were along the streams promptly at the stroke of twelve and from that time on until long after dark on Saturday night the slaughter of trout continued.

Numerous large catches were reported. That there were still many trout in the streams on Monday was proved by the number caught. Jimmy Kane landed a 21-inch trout on Monday. Bill Martin also caught a 21-inch beauty. Of course, Clayt. Brown, Joe Thal and Bill Walker simply walked away with the prize for the number caught, each landing a basket of fine trout. Bill Dukeman, quite early on Saturday, caught the limit, forty, and had to stop. Lew Schaffer, out for his first fishing in many years, caught a dozen or more beauties. W. L. Malin took a walk up and down Logan Branch and caught seventeen. Jim. Toner had to be content with seven. Mitchell Gardner tried it for about one hour, shortly after midnight on Friday night and caught four trout for his breakfast. F. W. Crider was rewarded with a haul of twelve nice trout. Jim. Furst caught upward of twenty, and John Curtin was a close second. Lew Bullock, of Milesburg, brought his son up for a few hours and had the pleasure of seeing him catch one of the largest trout landed during the day. Bob. Baney landed eleven nice trout early in the morning. John Bower got a nice string as did also Louis Daggett. Harry Baum caught thirteen. Frank Graham, now employed as clerk in the Hotel Milton, at Milton, caught some fine, big trout, one of the lot measuring upward of twenty inches. Cyril Moerschbacher was another who was lucky, returning home with some of the nicest trout during the day. Kline Woodring also was a blue ribbon fisherman, catching enough to satisfy even a lawyer's craving for trout. Ben. Gentzel was another, Dr. Kilpatrick another, Paul Sheffer another, and—

And so it went. Here and there could be found a fisherman who failed to catch anything but a cold, but he was the exception rather than the rule. There were some funny incidents along the streams. Out at Axe Mann three women and a little 4-year-old boy were fishing together. The little boy was the only one in the party to catch anything, one of his trout measuring eleven inches. Most persons expected that the crowd would be largest in Bellefonte, where the trout were so plentiful that they could be seen by the dozen from the banks of the creek. For this reason many persons went out to Logan Branch, only to find pretty nearly every available inch of ground, on both sides of the stream, occupied.

Died Ripe in Years.

Mrs. Lyda M. Shoemaker, one of the oldest residents in Centre County, died Wednesday night of last week at her home in Chester Hill, near Philipsburg. Her death was the result of complications incident to old age, and was not wholly unexpected, as she had for some time been showing evidences that the end was near. The deceased was born in Juniata county on February 21, 1822, making her age 89 years, 1 month and 22 days. In her young womanhood she was united in marriage to George Shoemaker, who died some years ago. She was the mother of ten children, five of whom survive, viz: Hannah C., F. Dorin and Susan E., at home; George D., residing in Clinton county, and Agnes, wife of Jesse Peightal, of Chester Hill. She had for many years been a member of the Methodist church. She was beloved by a large circle of friends, and those who knew her best loved her most. The funeral took place on Saturday.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease, that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer. One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The annual banquet of the High School Alumni was held in the grammar school on Saturday evening. Thirty-nine of the members were present for the fun and feast. The room was tastefully decorated in the different class colors and the evening proved a most delightful one to all.

The commencement program as printed in last week's "Republican" was carried out to perfection and every oration and essay showed a most careful preparation on the part of teacher and graduates. The address of Dr. Weber was intensely interesting and was well received by the audience.

Looking toward refined entertainment and intellectual betterment a number of our progressive citizens have formed a league by the name of the "Citizens Entertainment Organization. The intention is to arrange for a series of lectures, readings, music, etc. A movement of this sort has been looked forward to by many of our citizens for some time and requires a strong effort to be carried out successfully. At the recent meeting held in the High school room John A. Woodward was elected president, Chester A. Moore secretary, and Rev. E. F. Faust treasurer. A committee of arrangements will be appointed and the movement put under way in the near future.

Anthony Kanepp, an old Civil war soldier, came in from Pittsburg to spend Easter at his old home. He was a member of Co. G, 148 Penna. Vols, and is quite jubilant over the prospects of a reunion of the regiment some time this summer.

Last Saturday evening the members of Penns Valley Lodge, No. 276, I. O. O. F., of this place, held a stag party after the regular routine of lodge work had been gone through with. There was a feast and smoker that was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. It was 10.30 o'clock when Captain Fry called for order and chose Prof. S. C. Miller master of ceremonies and in a neat speech reminded the members of his 16 years experience in lodge work. A number of speakers enlivened the affair and the flow of fun and laughter was kept up to a late hour, when a vote of thanks was extended Dr. R. M. Krebs and his committee on entertainment. Two boxes of cigars went up in smoke, to say nothing of the feed.

Lumen Lodge, No. 639, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of this place, are organizing a class for the new degree team to be taken in on Saturday night, May 6, next. A number of applicants have presented their names, and there are bright prospects for more to follow.

I. J. Stere departed on Tuesday for Altoona, where he will spend a few days prior to his return to the West. Mr. Stere has a contract with the Seton Mining & Smelting Company, of Idaho, to drive 100 feet through solid rock for $2,000. He expect two men to finish his contract in at least seventy days. After this is completed he expects to return to Alaska.

Howard Cassady Peters and Miss Pauline Winifred Smith, of this place, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. J. W. Hoover, 2423 Eighth Avenue, Altoona, Pa., on Tuesday evening, April 11, at 6 o'clock. The beautiful ring ceremony was used, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Simpson B. Evans, pastor of the Eighth Avenue Methodist Episcopal church. The bride and groom, after visiting their numerous friends in Altoona, returned home on Thursday evening, on the 7.57 train, where one of the largest crowds of people seen at our depot in many a day were waiting to greet them. Almost before the train had stopped the sly young couple were off and running up the track, but our experienced band of serenaders was ready for any and all emergencies and soon overtook them and explained that a horseless carriage was waiting on them at the depot. The bride and groom were induced to return to the depot, where to their surprise they found a very handsome buggy, attractively decorated with bunting, tin cans and gum shoes. Of course they came to the conclusion that they would sooner walk than ride, but by a little bodily persuasion they were gently seated in the conveyance and away they went, drawn by about twenty young men and followed by men, women and children. Chief Marshal F. A. Holderman and Captain Joseph Stere and John W. Bruss led the procession. The serenaders escorted them safely to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, on Main Street, where, after some fine music and three cheers for the newly wedded couple, they left them. The serenaders then made haste for the store of J. C. Stere & Sons, where they were royally treated to fine confectionery and cigars, there being more than one hundrsd persons present at the feast. Thus ended the largest and best conducted serenade ever witnessed here. At 9 o'clock the bride and groom went to their new home, on the corner of Chestnut and Railroad Streets, where a large party of guests received them. After showering them with congratulations and best wishes a splendid supper was served. Three large tables were loaded down with all kinds of good things to eat, only to be quickly relived of their burden. Mr. and Mrs. Peters were the recipients of numerous beautiful and costly presents. May health, joy, happiness and long life be theirs. The following were present: Mrs. J. C. Smith, mother of the bride; Mrs. G. W. Bullock and children, of Julian, and Misses Grace and Katherine Smith, sisters of the bride; Mrs. Sallie Peters, mother of the groom; G. W. Rumberger and wife, J. Harold Fisher and wife, F. A. Holderman and wife, H. M. Stere and wife, J. B. Stere and wife, Mrs. Thomas Fisher, Mrs. Ellwood Fisher, Mrs. Laura Kephart, Mrs. H. E. Holtzworth, Mrs. J. P. Harris, Jr., Mrs. W. U. Irwin, Mrs. V. L. Wagner and Misses Clara Cadwallader, Verna Moran, Mary E. Griest, Mary R. Griest, Elloise Buck, Bessie Lansberry, Mary Shipley, Margaret Brugger, Lulu F. Moran, Hannah G. Holt, Mary A. Lansberry, Elba Scott, who is from New Castle, Pa., and George, Moran, J. T. Barton, J. B. Irwin, C. E. Underwood, R. B. Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brugger, Herman Fisher and John P. Harris.

Death of Mrs Montgomery.

On Monday night, at 9.30 o'clock, Mrs. Salina Montgomery, the aged mother of Theodore Cherry, of Bellefonte, passed away at the local hospital from diseases incident to her advanced age. She was about 75 years of age and Mr. and Mrs. Cherry brought her to Bellefonte from Mound City, Mo., on or about August 1st, 1910. She was then badly crippled with rheumatism. Instead of getting better she grew worse until she was taken to the hospital. The deceased belonged to the Free Methodist church and was a good old lady. She is survived by three children, Theodore, of Bellefonte; John S. Cherry, of Big Spring, Texas, and Mrs. Lizzie Ward, of Chicago. The private funeral will take place on Saturday morning or after noon. This depends entirely on the arrival of her son from Texas.

On next Sabbath evening Rev. Edwin A. Snook, of Newton Hamilton, will preach in the Milesburg Presbyterian church. He is an excellent preacher and he should be greeted by a large congregation.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

Barnum & Bailey's circus will be at Altoona, on Monday, May 8.

Captain George P. Runkle of the school ship Adams was a visitor in Bellefonte this week.

Mrs. Wistar Morris, of Overbrook, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Eliza Blanchard, on Linn Street.

Do you desire to see something shine with resplendent beauty? If you do just see Homer Barnes, at the Variety Shop. He'll put you next.

Mrs. John Huffman and her daughter, of Williamsport, spent Easter in Bellefonte as guests of Mrs. Huffman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Spigelmyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCoy will this evening, from eight to ten, entertain in honor of their son, John McCoy, and his bride, who was formerly Miss Mary Harris.

Mrs. Frank Derstine and two children, of Altoona, spent the Easter holidays in Bellefonte, dividing the time between the homes of Samuel Donachy and W. H. Derstine.

Howard Best, chauffeur for Col. W. Fred Reynolds, went to Williamsport Thursday to consult Dr. Haskin with reference to his eyes. While there he visited the automobile show.

David Chambers, John Boyce, W. C. Snyder, Dr. Edward Harris, George Uzzle and Squire Robert Cooper made up a party from Snow Shoe to come to Bellefonte on Tuesday for the Meyer funeral.

Monday's issue of the Tyrone Herald was away off when it announced the wedding of Howard Dry, of Tyrone, and Miss Mary Barlett, of Bellefonte. Our friend "Bert." must have been given a gold brick.

About the jolliest party along the trout streams on Monday were Mrs. John McCoy, Mrs. Donald S. Potter, Miss Paul D. Sheffer and Miss Jane Harper. Whether they or the trout had the more fun is an open question. Mrs. Potter caught the greatest number of trout.

On Sunday, April 23, Rev. Dr. Smiley, of the Second Presbyterian church, of Camden, N. J., will preach in the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, both morning and evening. On Sunday, April 30, the pulpit will be occupied, morning and evening, by Rev. Dr. Cook, of the First Presbyterian church, of Wheeling, West Virginia.

George Regel, Alonzo Schenck, W. C. Thompson and George Emenheiser all of whom reside near Howard, this week had their names enrolled on our list of regular readers of "The Republican." We are proud of the fact that our newspaper thus enters these new homes and our desire is to make it worthy of the confidence placed in it.

Merchant Toner Hugg and Harry Austin, of Milesburg, were among the Bellefonte visitors on Tuesday. Mr. Austin is just the man who is going to make house cleaning easy for the ladies of that old burg. He has purchased a vacwum cleaner and for 50 cents he will clean a carpet so perfectly that not a grain of dust will be left. He, however, will not guarantee that it will clean consciences.

Death at Hagerstown.

J. Irvin Bitner, a former resident of Liberty township, Centre county, died recently at Hagerstown, Md. He frequently visited friends at Blanchard, who were sorry to hear of his death. He was born near Blanchard, Liberty township, being a son of the late Daniel Bitner. He was a successful business man and a number of years ago left for Hagerstown, where he located permanently. He was always respected for his integrity, honesty and upright, Christian life. About one year ago he was stricken with paralysis from which he apparently recovered. A short time ago he contracted a severe cold which settled on his lungs so impairing his health that recovery was impossible. He was about 64 years of age. He leaves a widow and one daughter, and one adopted daughter, also three sisters, Mrs. W. I. Harter and Mrs. T. J. Bechdel, of Blanchard, and Mrs. John Neff, of Martinsburg, W. Va., and one brother, J. Albert Bitner, occupying the old homestead, near Blanchard.

Easter Services.

The beautiful Easter music and services in the several churches in Bellefonte excelled all former efforts to celebrate the greatest and most marvelous event in the history of the world, the ressurrection of Christ. The decorations in all the churches were unusually beautiful, Easter lillies predominating. The several ministers of the town delivered sermons appropriate to the occasion before large congregations. On the evening of Good Friday a special service was held in the St. John's Episcopal church, under the direction of Miss Mary Bradley. The large choir rendered the beautiful sacred cantata entitled "Olivetto Calvary." The church was crowded with a representative and attentive audience. Sabbath evening the choirs of the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches gave a song service in the Presbyterian church, which drew a large audience.

OCEAN SHIP TRAPS

KENTISH KNOCK IS PITILESS.

This Treacherous Spot Is the Real Davy Jones' Locker—No Hope For Vessel or Man When Neptune Asks Toll at This Submarine Graveyard.

"Davy Jones' locker," that perilous spot mention of which so often comes from the lips of sailors, is not shown on any ocean chart principally because it is not really a settled place, but if any ocean death trap deserved the title it is the Thames estuary.

The British naval authorities have a chart upon which is marked the position of wrecks, shown by black dots. On this chart the Thames mouth tract is a solid black spot. So numerous have been the wrecks the dots run together. The point where the black dots actually pile the one on the top of another is the Kentish Knock, and this is the place among all of the ocean danger spots that deserves the title of Davy Jones' locker.

At the Kentish Knock it is not keel shattering rocks nor piercing points of coral that wreck the ocean travelers. It is sand—treacherous, clinging sand—that grasps the doomed ship with a grip of steel and holds it firmly while the angry sea beats it to fragments. Many a vessel posted at Lloyd's as missing would be duly accounted for if the Knock sand would give up its prey. There is no hope for ship or man when Neptune asks toll at the Kentish Knock, for the nearest land is twenty miles away and the nearest lifeboat at Margate, thirty miles distant.

The sands of the ocean are far more dangerous than rocks. The sand banks extend over more space and therefore offer more points of contact than the rocks, which usually rise in slender pinnacles. The waters flow over the sands in smooth waves, and there are no warning breakers.

Next to the Thames mouth tract in point of danger is the Hooghly, the salt water river on which Calcutta stands. The most trying part of a large vessel's voyage from New York to Calcutta is the last few miles of this calm river. In this strange stream, in windless weather and flat calm water, vessels have been lost—dashed to pieces on the dreaded ever shifting sand banks by the force of the tides.

The sands grasp the keel of the marked vessel and she stops. But the tide moves on with relentless force, and the helpless ship is carried over on her beam ends. She careens over and founders with all on board. One of the worst shoals in the Hooghly bears the name of James and Mary. This was the name of a great Indian merchant ship wrecked on the sunken sand banks.

Another danger point dreaded by the master mariner has neither sand nor rocks, but a great submarine waterfall. In the English channel there is a point just beyond the Shambles bank where there is a sudden drop in the sea bottom. The channel tides sweep over the banks and down this sudden drop, creating rapids equal in fury to those of Niagara. The American ship Georgian foundered in Portland race, the name by which this danger point is known, and all hands went down with her.

Ships bound to New York from Europe pass near a deadly hidden shoal which runs out from Sable island, lying off Cape Sable, in Nova Scotia. The shoal runs out for miles in five directions, like the fingers of a great hand reaching out for what it can destroy.

When the gales blow heavy seas boom upon the shoals with sufficient force to shatter the stanchest vessel afloat, and when the wind ceases the beaches are strewn with the bodies of those who have perished. The distance from the shore is too great and the surf too heavy for the life savers to reach a struggling vessel, and few lives are saved at this point. Ten vessels have been wrecked in this trap in a single week.

The rocky danger points in the ocean have nearly all been classified, and lighthouses have been erected on the most dangerous—except one. There is no lighthouse on the Virgin rock, and there never will be.

Out in the mid-Atlantic this giant pinnacle rears its head up from the ocean floor and vainly seeks to reach the surface of the sea. It is short by about eighteen feet. There it stands, with its sharp point hidden by the ocean waves, waiting to pierce the bottom of some unsuspecting vessel and send it down to join the pile of ships' ribs and dead men's bones that litter the floor around its base.

The waves seem to be in league with the rock, for if a vessel of light draft tries to pass over its head the waves drop it down into a trough at the bottom of which the point of the rock is waiting to rip out its keel.—Harper's Weekly.

It Was Easy.

"You didn't catch a single fish during your trip?"

"No, but"—

"Yes, you got lots of bites. And some big ones got away. But Jones went up there after you came home"—

"The big bluff!"

"Of course. But he caught the banner fish of the season."

"After that same fish had fattened himself on twenty-eight pounds of my bait! Why not?"—Cleveland Leader.

One can stop when he ascends, but not when he descends.—Napoleon.

TAMED THE SAVAGE.

A Plucky Salesman and a Merchant With a Bad Grouch.

A salesman for a carpet house called on the proprietor of a big store. This man had a reputation for eating salesmen alive. After several unsuccessful attempts to see his man the salesman decided to use desperate means to get to him. He knew that the man must buy a bill of goods, for he knew what stock he was carrying and knew that he must lay in a supply for the opening of the season.

In the afternoon he called at the store and deliberately walked into the owner's private office and placed a card on his desk. The storekeeper did not look up from his papers for several minutes. Then he turned savagely on the salesman and said:

"Who in Sam Hill let you in? I left orders to have you thrown out if you came again."

With that he threw the card savagely in the wastebasket. The salesman drew another from his pocket and placed it on the desk where the first had been. Without looking up from his work the buyer threw that in the wastebasket. The salesman threw down two or three other cards with the same result, and finally, almost purple with rage, the merchant turned on him:

"Well, well, well, what is it?"

"I was just thinking," said the salesman, "that if every man your salesmen called on was such an infernal, ignorant, no account grouch as you are what cussed few orders they would book and how quickly you would go out of business. That's all, sir; goodby."

"Hold on there a minute," broke in the grouch in a much changed tone. "I guess I owe you an apology. You're right. Let's see your line."—Bookkeeper.

THE EVERGLADES.

This Fertile Florida Region Is an Old Mountain Top.

One of the strange facts about the Everglades region of Florida is that it is really a decayed mountain top. The crest is formed of massive limestone, usually covered by a mantle of sand. In this formation are numberless pot holes which vary in size from a few feet to thousands of acres; also countless lakes of fresh water springs and frequent subterranean streams and pools.

A few miles north of Cape Sable is an outcrop of limestone which projects to Lake Okeechobee. In this outcrop is an extensive shallow basin extending 130 miles north and south and about seventy miles east and west, while the altitude of its rim is twelve feet above mean tide in Biscayne bay and a little less above the gulf of Mexico.

This rim is from three to twelve miles from the ocean edge of the coastal plain on the east and a distance of fifty miles from the gulf on the west. So far as explored it extends all around the edge of the basin, forming a complete cup. As a result of the weather and flowing water the run has been worn into fantastic shapes. The depth of the basin varies from a foot at the rim to as much as twelve feet in places, but generally the rock floor is from a depth of one to six feet.

And here is the secret of the fertility of the Everglades. Above the entire rock floor rises a layer of muck, formed of an alluvial deposit and of decayed vegetable matter. This deposit varies from a few inches to several feet in thickness. The water covering this deposit comes from springs that in turn have their source in the lake.—Cassier's Magazine.

George Sand.

It was from Leonard Jules Sandeau, the celebrated French novelist and dramatist, born at Aubusson a century ago, that another and far greater writer derived her nom de guerre. When a young student in Paris Sandeau made the acquaintance of Mme Dudevant, and during a short lived friendship they collaborated in a novel, "Rose et Blanche," which was published in 1831. Then they parted, but Mme. Dudevant, while relinquishing Sandeau's friendship, took to herself a portion of his name and elected to be known thenceforth as George Sand.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Fourth Estate.

Thomas Carlyle says that the term "fourth estate" was first applied to the newspapers by Edmund Burke when speaking in the house of commons about 1790. In consequence of the freedom which had been won for it during the reign of William of Orange the press had by the time of Burke become the power which well deserved to rank up with the king, lords and commons as one of the estates of the realm, one of the great creative forces of the kingdom.

Testing a Hat.

Put on your hat and all outdoor regalia, says the London Chronicle, and then go where you can stand between a strong light and a bare wall. Notice your silhouette and note the proportions and symmetry. If these are not artistic or satisfactory, throw away the hat and buy another.

The Unhumbled Valet.

The Duke of Cambridge was once about to visit Lord Stratford, who had been appointed ambassador to Turkey. At an early hour on the morning of his expected arrival the ambassador went, in slippers and dressing gown, to see if the rooms were in perfect order. He found that the duke's valet had arrived and was arranging his master's trunks and portmanteaus. Stratford gave some directions how they should be placed. The man left off working and stared at the intruder.

"I tell you what it is," he said. "I know how his royal highness likes to have his things arranged better than you do. So you just be off, will you, old fellow?"

Lord Stratford left in a towering passion. Calling one of his attaches, he ordered him to go in and tell the man whom he had addressed in such language. The attache returned with twinkling eyes.

"What did you say?" asked the ambassador.

"I said to him, my lord, that the person he had ventured to address such language to was her majesty's representative to Turkey."

"Ah, quite right. And his answer?"

"He answered, my lord, that he never said you wasn't."—"With Lord Stratford In the Crimean War."

Wise Men of Gotham.

A "wise man of Gotham" is a fool, but the phrase arose through the real wisdom of the people that lived in the English town of Gotham. The story goes that King John of England once visited the town with the intention of seeing a castle that he thought of taking for himself. But the Gothamites did not care for the nearness of royalty and the expense they would be put to if the king should have a house there, and so they cooked up a scheme to drive him away. When the king arrived with his company of followers and rode through the town he saw all the inhabitants of Gotham going through the most foolish of tasks, each person with a silly smile on his face. The king was disgusted with them. He would not live among crazy people, and so he rode on through the town and did not stop for the castle. Then the wise men of Gotham, still smiling, but not in a silly fashion, told one another that there were more fools that passed through Gotham than remain in it.

Not What He Seemed.

Lieutenant General J. M. Grierson tells an amusing story of some maneuvers in which he took part. Only a small body of troops were being actually employed, and "skeleton forces" were the rule—in other words, small bodies of men represented whole divisions. General Grierson with his staff was riding along a lane when he suddenly came upon one of the enemy's pickets sitting calmly by the roadside. Quickly the general rode up to him and said:

"You are my prisoner; you had better surrender."

The man grinned and pointed to a flag beside him.

"Beg pardon, sir," he said, "but I am a brigade of infantry, so you are all my prisoners."—London Mail.

Christians In Old Rome.

Religious persecution as such was unknown under the Romans. The Christians were regarded as seditious. In denying the divinity of the Caesars and the Roman gods they were guilty of high treason in Roman eyes and were accordingly punished. But their punishment had no religious significance whatever. The Christians were persecuted not because they were Christians, but because, in the opinion of the authorities, they were disturbers of the peace and safety of the state. Religious persecution was a thought that never entered the Roman mind.—New York American.

Wounds of the Heart.

In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity or cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation.

Cutting.

A Scotch lawyer was well reproved when, seated by a lady fully aware of her own plain looks, having bowed to his hostess in giving the toast, "Honest Men and Bonnie Lasses," she rejoined, raising her own glass, "We may both drink that toast, since it refers to neither of us."

Similar Tastes.

Belle—But do you think you and he are suited to each other? Nell—Oh, perfectly! Our tastes are quite similar. I don't care very much for him, and he doesn't care very much for me.—Paris Figaro.

"Seems nourishing," replied the customer, "but I've had my breakfast."—Washington Herald.

The Long Arm.

We should not be too niggardly in our praise, for men will do more to support a character than to raise one.—Colton.

The Split-log Drag Used Successfully.

The Beech Creek correspondent to the Lock Haven Express says that a splendid example of the efficacy of the split-log drag was given recently in Bald Eagle township on the public road between the homes of J. G. Packer and Robert Packer. This road was cut horribly by the hauling over it of heavy loads of lumber and deep ruts formed that allowed passage in a vehicle only as fast as a horse could walk. The supervisors got busy with a split-log drag and a team of horses, ahead of which two or three men broke down the ruts and filled in with small stones where obtainable. After hauling the drag back and forth for several hours the road rounded up in the middle and was made as smooth as a race track. Presenting a wonderful change in fact, one would hardly believe such an improvement possible with so little amount of time, labor and expense incurred. It proves that the advocates of good roads in the country know what they are talking about when they prescribe the use of the split-log. It is strange that supervisors are so slow to test this simple instrument which has been brought to their attention widely by government publications on the subject, in the R. F. D. "News" and other periodicals. Certain conditions are necessary in order to use the split-log drag, such as are found following a rain, but the entire process is simple enough and certainly inexpensive. Perhaps if it were not so simple, if the machine cost several hundred dollars, and required a whole lot of men to perform the operation and made more orders necessary on the treasurer of the road district, then it would be used more frequently in nearly every district. Where nothing but common dirt roads are practicable because of the expense of using crushed stone, the split-log drag is apparently the best thing yet, certainly the cheapest.

President Risks Life.

President Taft made a fruitless attempt, on Friday, to save the lives of a small negro boy and his mother, who threw the child into the tidal basin of the Potomac and jumped in after him. Mother and boy were drowned.

While riding at the eastern end of the speedway with Major Butt, his military aide, and an orderly, the President's attention was drawn to a number of men who were raising a commotion on the bank of the tidal basin. He hastened to the scene and, on being told of the circumstances, sent his orderly to the nearest police station to summon aid.

Finding that there was no possibility of helping from the shore, as the mother and child were floundering in the water fifty feet away, Major Butt galloped to the nearest park police station and urged the policeman in charge to summon the police boat to make an effort to save the suicide and her child.

The rescue party was too late. The bodies were recovered Friday night.

While the President was attempting to assist in saving these two lives, Philip C. Arlington, a seaman on the official yacht, Dolphin, blew his brains out. No reason had been ascribed for the act. Arlington was a native of Washington.

Failed to Appear.

The New Castle News says that District Attorney Thomas W. Dickey decided not to appear before the Board of Pardons in behalf of the commonwealth on Wednesday when the application for a pardon for Dominick Panaro, the murderer of Orin Magwire, of Philipsburg, and presented by Attorney S. P. Emery, to ask that the death sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life. Attorney Dickey believed that the evidence against Panaro was so conclusive that there was no need for his making any argument. He submitted the testimony in the case and allowed the pardon board to draw their own conclusions.

Great Staying Powers.

Starting at Middleburg with $4 in his pocket, Charles Fry, the 17-year-old boy who mysteriously disappeared some weeks ago, walked to Carey, Ohio, 340 miles, and had fifty cents left on his arrival in that city.

Now the citizens in his section are predicting a great future for him. They say a boy who can travel 340 miles on $3.50 has in him the stuff out of which great men are made.

The boy vouchsafed no explanation regarding his sudden disappearance from home, merely telling his parents in a letter that he intended to stay in the West.

A WASTED SALUTE

Naval Powder, Pomp and Splendor and a Fizzle.

A SURPRISE FOR FARRAGUT.

The Admiral, With His Assembled Staff, Was Under the Impression That He Was About to Greet a Military Guest, but He Was Mistaken.

A group of officers were "swapping" stories at the Army and Navy club in Washington one night when one was reminded of an amusing incident that occurred in connection with the stay of the flagship Monongahela at Pensacola bay when Farragut was on board.

The old fighter had been very busy the week before paying official calls on the mainland, and among those who had entertained him was General Canby. When, therefore, word was received that the general would visit the ship the next day the admiral was determined to have everything in readiness to receive him in a style becoming his rank.

The old boat was scrubbed and holystoned from stem to stern, the brass work was given an extra rub, and things generally were put into the best of order. The captain of the marines had a special inspection of his company, and not a spot of rust or a dull helmet spike escaped his notice. When night closed in darkness settled down over a very clean ship and a very tired ship's company.

Bright and early the next morning the admiral's launch was sent off to bring the general aboard. At the last moment it was discovered that there was no fruit for luncheon, and Pomp, the admiral's cook, was sent in the dinghy to get some.

Pomp was a character in his way and had been with the admiral for many years. He was very proud of what he called his military bearing and wore his beard carefully trimmed to a point. His hair and beard were nearly white, and, although he was sixty years old, he ruled the other negroes with a rod of iron.

By 10 o'clock every one was standing by in full dress, when the quartermaster came aft and reported that the admiral's launch was returning. The officer of the deck walked to the rail and took a squint at the boat through his glasses. A man clad in blue uniform was seated in the admiral's cane chair in the stern, but as the gunwale struck him just below his shoulder and the awning hid his head the officer of the deck was not certain that it was General Canby until as the wind lifted the edge of the awning he caught a glimpse of a gray beard.

Word was passed that the general was coming. The crew were beat to quarters, the marine guard paraded, and the gun squad, detailed to fire the salute, took their stations. Everything was in readiness, and the admiral and his staff stood at the head of the gangway to receive the guest. A hush of expectancy settled over the ship.

The boat drew nearer. Just as the launch scraped alongside, boom, boom, came the salute from the guns.

"Present arms!" came the command to the guard, and at a sign from the flag officer the band struck up "Hail to the Chief."

Amid all this military pomp and splendor the occupant of the launch was slowly clambering, feet foremost, and just as the last gun was fired he stood erect at the top of the gangway. It was the admiral's cook with a bag of fruit in each hand! The honors intended for a general had been rendered to old Pomp! As the situation dawned on the men even discipline could not check a general shout of laughter. The old admiral himself laughed until he could laugh no longer.

It seemed that in some way the dinghy had gone off and left the old negro and that he managed to convince the coxswain that "Marse Farragut was jest bound to have dat fruit befo' the general came."

Pomp wanted to land at the port gangway, but the coxswain insisted that the admiral's launch never went to the port side and that the old man would have to land on the starboard side, aft. Had the awning been a little higher the mistake in identification would not have occurred. As things were, no one could be blamed, and the affair was treated as a joke, while the old cook was nicknamed the "General."

When an hour later General Canby did come he was received with all due ceremony and on being told the story laughed until the tears rolled down his cheeks and demanded to see the man who had stolen his salute.—New York Press.

History of Civil War.

Fifty years ago, on April 12, 1861, Fort Sumter was fired upon.

Fifty years ago this country was just awakening to the shock of the greatest war that has ever been fought.

In this Semi-Centennial Year The Inquirer will print a continued story of the momentous events of that period which altered the history of this country if not of the entire world.

A complete history of the Civil War retold in graphic and dramatically interesting manner by an expert historian.

The entire narrative of the great conflict, as told by war correspondents of The Philadelphia Inquirer in the field from 1861 to 1865, will be retold with historical accuracy in the light of later developments.

This is not the story of the war reprinted day by day and lasting through the long drawn out period of nearly five years.

From the firing upon Sumter, in April, '61, to Bull Run, in July '61, no critical tests of the strength of the two great armies occurred, the period being occupied mostly with recruiting and some few minor skirmishes and battles.

The Inquirer will tell the entire story of the War in the next three months.

A full page every Sunday will describe in their order the great battles of the war, while the intervening articles in the daily issues of The Inquirer will make a connected story, covering the entire conflict.

Do not miss this highly instructive and entertaining history, which will be a daily and Sunday feature in The Inquirer during the next three months of this semi-centennal year.

The Civil War will be the great topic of the year, and those who aim to be well informed will find these articles of inestimable value.

If you are not now a regular reader leave your order at once for both the Daily and Sunday Inquirer.

The Ground Hog's Opinion.

From the Thompsontown Globe we clip the following:

"Winter is going to linger longer in the lap of spring according to a ground hog which Emery Shaffer, of Zion, plowed up week before last. Angered at being turned out of hibernation before the time which mysterious instinct tells him is proper, the irate predictor of the seasons bit the farmer in the calf of the leg. Ground hogs never violate the law and properties in that way when the balm of spring greets their advent from their winter burrows, so the assault is regarded as a renewal of the prediction made February 2.

"Shaffer's first impulse was to run after the ground hog, but he found this quite unnecessary, as the ground hog started after him, and before he could defend himself had set its teeth in his calf. The farmer had the wound cauterized."

Roofing Guarantees.

When a maker guarantees his roofing, it merely means that he puts his claims for it in writing, and if there is any dispute afterwards, there are thousands of ways in which the maker can evade responsibility if he chooses.

The makers of Congo Roofing, however, have devised an interesting plan which gives the buyer absolute protection. With each roll of roofing is furnished a Surety Bond issued by the National Surety Company of New York, guaranteeing the faithful performance of the guaratee by the manufacturers. This gives to any possible complainant a Court of Appeals to which he can go, over the head of the manufacturer. In fact, this guaratee bond so pledges that if the manufacturers of Congo Roofing should go bankrupt or close out their business, the Surety Company would still continue to guarantee the reliability and satisfaction of Congo Roofing. The guarantee on the two or three ply is for 10 years.

Wills Money to Nice Girls.

Samuel Rudy, aged 36 years, a bachelor, of Canton, Ohio, who is reported to be worth $200,000 and with no immediate relatives, Friday drew up a new will in which he made 10 young women, employed in the Stark county court house offices and a law firm's stenographer as beneficiaries to the extent of $1,000 each. Rudy met the girls during long litigation in the courts over the question as to whether he was capable of handling his own property.

Probate Judge C. C. Bow, who questioned Rudy at length and heard statements from physicians after an inqury, decided that Rudy should have a guardian and appointed one. Rudy, however, appealed and won his case by a jury verdict.

"The girls work hard and are nice and deserving," said Rudy, in explaining his newest whim."

Mexico a Smokers' Paradise.

Old Mexico has one advantage in the shape of cheap tobacco. The leaf grows freely in the republic of the south, and its government levies no tax upon it. For 2½ cents in American or United States money you can buy an excellent cigar, every whit as good as our 10-cent brand. And cigarettes are the same way. To protect the domestic production the Mexican tax on imported tobacco is altogether prohibitive. American cigars in that country are so high no one thinks of buying them.

At Nogales, a border town, there is an international street, one side of which is in Arizona and the other in Sonora, North Mexico. On the south side of this street a tobacco store sells an excellent cigar of a certain brand for 5 cents. Across the street on the American side, the identical brand of cigar, is exposed for sale at 13 cents. To bring the Mexican cigar across the narrow street and make a profit, the American dealer must sell the Maxican product at three times its original value.

The laboring class profit by the exemption of native tobacco in Mexico, They are able to purchase two boxes of cigarettes, containing 10 each, for 2½ cents in our money. The tobacco in these cheap cigarettes is the sundried natural leaf and of a coarse grade with coarse paper wrapping. But it answers well its purpose. The market, of course, is abundantly supplied also with cigarettes containing high-grade tobacco in the best paper wrapping. It is in the cigarette from that the Mexican uses his tobacco.

To Avoid the Danger of Fire.

If the following precautions are followed, fires from accident and spontaneous combustion will seldom occur:

Keep your house, store or factory clean.

Never allow rubbish, such as paper, rags, cobwebs, old clothes, boxes etc., to accumulate in closets and unused rooms.

Never fill the coal-oil lamps after dark or near an open fire.

Never run the stovepipe through a wooden partition or the roof without proper protection.

Never allow your furnace, steam or hot-water pipes to come in contact with the woodwork of the building.

Never put ashes in a wooden receptacle on or about the premises.

Never keep matches in other than metal or earthen safes; and never throw one on the floor, lit or unlit.

Never take an unprotected light to inspect a gas meter or closet.

Dyspepsia is our national ailment. Burdock Blood Bitters is the national cure for it. It strengthens stomach membranes, promotes flow of digestive juices, purifies the blood, builds you up.

Decorating Berwick.

Professional decorators are already at work in Berwick putting the principal buildings in gala attire for the Odd Fellows' celebration on April 26.

Word has already been received from thirty-one lodges and it is known that no less than eighteen bands will be in line.

Following the parade there will be a massed bands feature together with a grouping of I. O. O. F. banners and Patriarchs Militant.

Hall—Bloom.

George W. Hall, of Julian, took to himself a bride a few days ago in the person of Miss Martha Bloom, of Philipsburg. The wedding took place at the home of the groom's father in Julian, and was a very pretty affair. The happy couple proceeded at once to housekeeping in Julian, eating their wedding supper in their own furnished home. They will have the best wishes of their many friends.

Penn State's Track Events.

P. Edwin Thomas, graduate manager, has arranged the following track schedule for Penn State. April 29, Penn relays, at Philadelphia; May 5, annual interscholastic meet on Beaver field; May 6, Bucknell, at State College; May; 13, Swarthmore, at State College; May 27, national intercollegiates, at Harvard; June 12, Stars of the Western Pennsylvania colleges, at State College.

A Good Bill.

Governor Tener has approved a bill providing a penalty of $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than a year, or both, for any person or persons guilty of giving any show of "lascivious, sacreligious, obscene, indecent or immoral" nature. This is a most effective weapon for the elimination of indecent performances on the stage or in moving picture theaters.

Danderine

Grows Hair and we can PROVE IT!

The Great DANDERINE Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results.

IT enlivens and invigorates the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, resulting in a continuous and increasing growth of the hair.

Letters of praise are continually coming in from nearly all parts of the country stating that Danderine has renewed the growth of hair in cases that were considered absolutely hopeless.

A lady from Brooklyn writes: "After a short trial my hair stopped falling, and I now have a lovely head of hair, very heavy and over one and a quarter yards long."

Danderine stimulates the scalp, makes it healthy and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp invigorator known. It is a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a small bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

Now on sale at every drug and toilet store in the land; 3 sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

Cut This Out — Free To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

The State Thanks Carnegie.

One of the most elaborate State papers ever sent out from the Capitol was that dispatched on Saturday to Andrew Carnegie, conveying the formal thanks of the Legislature of Pennsylvania to the iron master for the donation of the properties at Cresson to the State Department of Health for the establishment of a tuberculosis sanitarium.

The resolution of the Legislature is bound in a blue leather volume about 18 by 12 inches and is engrossed on parchment by James C. Deininger, one of the clerks of the Department of Secretary of the Commonwealth. The preamble is set forth and the paragraphs of the resolution are illuminated, the section reciting the donation being marked by a laurel wreth. The next has the National and State flags and the third conveying the thanks, begins with a blue keystone.

The certification is stamped with the great seal of the State and is attested by the Secretary of Commonwealth.

Guests at Centre Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Stover, of Yeagertown, were in Centre Hall for several days, guests of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Runkle, and Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Burris, Mrs. Burris and Mr. Stover being brother and sister. Mr. Stover is a tinner and plumber, and is doing a brisk business in his line. He thinks the Burnham plants will be enlarged during the coming summer, and that the apparent slack times are more largely due to the installation of modern machinery rather than lack of orders. Mr. Stover says the Centre county people in Mifflin county are prospering, notably Contractor George Tate, who is getting the lion's share of the large contracts being let in that section.

For Sale.

Used engines, boilers, machinery, shafting, boxes, iron pulleys, mandrels, saw mill, automatic mill, lath mill and bolter, iron cylinder, heavy chains for log jack work, smoke stack, 80ft. wrought iron fence and two gates, spark arrester, cast iron pipe 11 inch diameter, two boilers, drag saw, 1 large and two small office desks, one counter with drawers, steel ceiling, odd lot of lumber, moulding, etc.

P. B. CRIDER & SON,
11-10-4t. Bellefonte, Pa.

A Good Move.

It is announced that James A. Patten, the Chicago grain and cotton operator, is to spend two million dollars of his fortune in a systematic effort to rid the world of tuberculosis. For months past Mr. Patten has been shaping his affairs, according to his friends, so that he would be in a position to take personal charge of the work of stamping out the white plague. Mr. Patten's determination to fight tuberculosis came after the death last year of his brother, George W. Patton, of that malady. Mr. Patten declares that "a man should dispose of great wealth for the benefit of the community, social service being the one great thing in life."

An Encouraging Prediction.

It is one of the theories of old Isaac Dickinson, of Tacony, Pa., that when early April is cold and raw, like the most of the days thus far have been, that it indicates a rich and abundant harvest. "It has never failed," declared Mr. Dickinson, "and I have been keeping account of the weather in April for forty years."

John Swartz, of Philipsburg, spent Friday with friends in Bellefonte.

Miss Mary Barlett is now in Altoona, where she is spending several weeks.

C. A. Sullivan, of Bellefonte, was a pleasant visitor at this office one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Watson, of Bellefonte, spent Easter with friends in Altoona.

Edgar Evey, of Renovo, spent his Easter vacation with his parents at Pleasant Gap.

Newton Dunlap left this week for Brisbin, where he will be employed during the summer.

Mrs. Minnie Hunter, of State College, was an over-Sunday guest at the home of Daniel Heckman.

Miss Katherine McCoy, an employ of this office, spent Easter with her brother, Herbert and family, at Jersey Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair Yarnell, and two children, of Snow Shoe, spent Easter at the McClellan home, on Lamb Street.

Mrs. Sidney Barlett and three children, of Altoona, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. David Barlett, on Thomas Street.

George Waite, of Juniata, spent Sunday in Bellefonte as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Waite, on Willowbank Street.

George Wian and family, of Pittsburg, have been visiting in Bellefonte at the home of his brother, James Wian, on Logan Street.

Mrs. Guyer Kling and daughter, Dorothy, of Altoona, spent Sunday in Bellefonte, as the guests of Mrs. Kling's mother, Mrs. Alice Caine.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Faust, of Altoona, spent Easter in Bellefonte as guests of Mrs. Faust's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Rine, on High Street.

Prof. "Budd" Harper, of Columbus, Ohio, was a recent visitor in Bellefonte as the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harper, on Howard Street.

Misses Rachel, Sarah and Anna Shuey and Dorothy Jenkins, of Bellefonte, spent Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Williamsport as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Donachy.

Several new subscribers at Orviston were enrolled this week. They are J. S. Bathurst, Taylor Fravel and Moses Haugh. Here's hoping all three find "The Republican" all they could wish for and more.

Mrs. Anna Bole and son, Isaac, of Pittsburg, were Easter guests at the home of Sheriff and Mrs. W. E. Hurley. Mrs. Bole is a sister of Mrs. Hurley and is a woman of many splendid attainments. They returned to Pittsburg on Monday.

Dr. W. H. Fry, the well known and remarkably successful veterinarian, made a flying trip through Mifflin and Snyder counties during the early part of the week. He was engaged in responding to several urgent calls where his professional services were in need.

Rev. William Dale, of Pittsburg, passed through Bellefonte on Monday afternoon for Pine Grove Mills where he spent a couple of days with his father, William J. Dale. On his return Wednesday he spent several hours in Bellefonte as a guest of his uncle, Clement Dale, Esq.

Prof. C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, one of the most popular residents in that section of the county, was among those who attended the funeral of the late Hon. J. C. Meyer on Tuesday. While in Bellefonte he did not fail to call at "The Republican" office. He is always a welcome guest.

"Joe" Bryant left Bellefonte on Wednesday for Morgantown, Ind., where he has secured a position as blower in a large glass works. If "Joe" had all the money that slipped through his fingers outside of his living he would own a glass works. He is one of the best glass blowers in the state and made as much money as any blower in the State, but he didn't keep it.

Did George R. Meek, of Bellefonte, enjoy Easter? Well, if he didn't it wasn't because he hadn't cause for rejoicing. On Saturday afternoon his wife presented him with an Easter present in shape of a ten-pound baby boy. Hereafter the little fellow will be known as P. Gray Meek, Jr. If he follows in the footsteps of his grandfather he will be all right. Of course, in a week or so he will be out on the farm hunting eggs and attending to that new incubator.

Last week J. Finklestine, proprietor of the Bellefonte five and ten cent store, left for York, Pa., where he has another store of the same kind. Hereafter Maurice Finklestine will have charge of the Bellefonte store while J. Finklestine will devote more attention to the York store. If you havn't visited the Bellefonte store since its removal to the Aikens' block you have missed something quite attractive. A new floor show case is one of the many new features.

While W. V. Larimer, of Bellefonte, was in Reedsville recently he talked to Charles Meyer, son of David Meyer, of Centre Hall, who is one of "Uncle Sam's" R. F. D. carriers. In the conversation Mr. Meyer said he purchased a horse five years ago for $20, and in that time he has traveled over 37,500 miles, which was going some. To secure a horse to-day that would do the same work Mr. Meyer would have to go down in his "socks" for about $200. This shows the rise in prices of horse flesh during the last few years. You can purchase a first class automobile for what you now pay for a good team of horses.

The other day Clayton Brown, the Bellefonte moving picture man, was in Williamsport, and while looking through the automobile department of Keeler & Co., he saw a Stoddart Dayton machine that just suited his fancy. He began to make inquiry about it, and before the conversation closed between him and the salesman he purchased the machine. It is a second-handed touring car and carries five passengers. It is upholstered in leather and otherwise well equipped. "Clayte" and his excellent wife believe in keeping up with the twentieth century mode of travelling. We hope it isn't the kind that wants to run up every telephone pole it comes to along the road. They will have considerable enjoyment out of it.

Miss Eva Crissman left Bellefonte Friday for Sunbury, where she spent Easter with friends.

Elmer E. Davis came home from New York on Friday and spent Easter with his family on Linn Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Doll and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fleming, of Altoona, spent Sunday in Bellefonte.

An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lambert, of Milesburg died Friday. It was buried at Curtin on Saturday.

Jerome Dale, spent his Easter vacation with his parents and friends in Bellefonte. He returned to Renovo Monday afternoon.

Richard McCoy, of Jersey Shore, is visiting at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCoy, on Thomas Street.

Charles Potter Miller, son of John C. Miller, who was brought to Bellefonte from Pittsburg, suffering from pleurisy, is improving.

Judging from the improvement it looks as if George Mallory, the Bellefonte blacksmith, is going to start a bank out in his end of town.

Fred Fry, son of W. H. Fry, of Pine Grove Mills, is in the dairy business at Sabbath Rest, Blair county, and is becoming very successful.

Miss Luella Shook, stenographer for the Barnhart Type Co., at Pittsburg, spent Easter in Bellefonte as the guest of her sister, Mrs. William Shope.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Topelt and son, of Brooklyn, N. Y., haye been visiting in Bellefonte at the residence of Mrs. Topelt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Brouse.

John D. Meyer, formerly superintendent of the Bellefonte Schools, now a banker in Altoona, spent Easter in Centre Hall as the guest of his parents, David Meyer and wife.

In about one month from now Mrs. Boyd Musser, of Altoona, daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. William Musser, of Bellefonte, will sail for Ireland, where she will visit friends and relatives.

Rev. Dr. H. C. Holloway, formerly pastor of the Bellefonte Lutheran church, who holds a position in the State Highway Department, at Harrisburg, offered prayer in the House on Wednesday of last week.

The annual allowance of $180 for each organization for rifle practic is announced in general orders from National Guard headquarter, at Harrisburg. Company L., of Bellefonte, will just be that much ahead.

Linn Graham, of Philadelphia, and Frank Graham, of Milton, were visitors in Bellefonte. They came here purposely to help the boys open the trout season, and Frank took the belt for catching one of the largest.

F. Milford Pletcher, A. D. Gladhill, Dr. W. J. Kurtz, John Weber, William Weber, Chester A. Moore, Charles Bowes, John A. Woodward, Harry E. Jenkins and Willard McDowell were among those from Howard to attend the Meyer funeral on Tuesday.

Saturday evening Miss Marvin, head milliner at Joseph's store, lost a beautiful Shriner pin. She was very much excited over her misfortune, but finally an honest man turned up and the much prized article was returned to her. Such happenings often become the foundation of a romance.

Our new subscribers this week include J. H. DeLong, of Juniata. Mr. DeLong last week attended the aannual commencement exercises of the Howard High School and before returning to Juniata added his name to the list of regular readers of "The Republican."

Last week W. V. Larimer, the efficient manager of the Palace Livery, went to Reedsville and purchased a large and handsome team of horses from William McNitt. He brought them to Bellefonte and sold them to Lauderbach-Barber Co., wholesale grocers. They weigh 3650 pounds, and are just as good as they are big.

George W. Mason, the progressive druggist of Lock Haven, was in Bellefonte on Tuesday attending the funeral of the late Hon. J. C. Meyer. He was closely associated with the deceased as an official of the Centre—Clinton Counties Business Men's Association. He, and J. Will Conley were pleasant callers at this office.

Hon. David Speer, a brother of the late William T. Speer, arrived in Bellefonte Tuesday afternoon with the other members of the State Legislature to attend the funeral of Hon. J. C. Meyer. Mr. Speer's home is in Chambersburg. He is representing Franklin County in the Legislature for the second term. He and Mr. Meyer were warm friends.

Saturday evening The Thespians, of State College will appear in Garman's opera house. The play they put on the stage this season is far superior to any in the past. The young men should be greeted by a large audience. It will open at 7:30 o'clock with a grand concert by the State College orchestra which will be well worth the price of admission.

The paving of High Street in front of the Bush House will be abandoned until the bridge is permanently repaired. It has been circulated around that the persons owning the building in which "The Republican" office is located had refused to pay their share toward the bricking of the said street. We have been reliably informed that the question was never submitted to them, but they will not stand in the way of this improvement. Whenever the work is finished they will pay their share of expense.

On Friday evening the residents of Bush's Addition gave Mrs. Sarah Young, of that place, a birthday surprise. Mrs. Young had almost forgotten that she had reached another milestone in the journey of life but her memory was quickly refreshed when she answered a knock at the door and found a large number of her friends who had come to bring joy and comfort to her. Mrs. Young is an exceptionally pleasant lady and thus the time was spent in a most delightful manner. Mrs. Young is a sister of Capt. W. H. Fry, of Pine Grove Mills, who was greeting his many friends in Bellefonte on Saturday. He was here in the interest of the Tressler—Reed farm deal. While he is a successful veterinarian he always finds time to help or a ccommodate his friends.

Don't fail to read Green's advertisement in page 5.

Mrs. Katherine Hastings and her daughter, Miss Zoe, of Beech Creek, spent Thursday in Bellefonte.

Rudolph Moholland, of Altoona, was a recent visitor in Bellefonte as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shuey.

Miss Rella Williams daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Williams, spent several days recently in Philadelphia.

Dr. Nell Meek, of Johnstown, spent Easter in Bellefonte as the guest of her parents, Hon. and Mrs. P. Gray Meek.

Mrs. D. Kirk Tate, and children, of Altoona, spent several days in Bellefonte this week visiting friends and relatives.

Mrs. Thomas Morris, and son King, of Pittsburg, have come to Bellefonte to spend part of the summer with her paents.

Comer Shope, one of our valued subscribers at Howard, recently favored us by advancing his subscription another year.

We are indebted to S. H. Swope, of Monument, for a crisp one dollar bill, advancing his subscription to "The Republican" another year.

Miss Ruth Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Young, of Bellefonte, spent Easter with her grandparents, at Jersey Shore.

William Benford, who was recently a patient in the Bellefonte hospital, is now at his home at Chester Hill, near Philipsburg, and is improving very nicely.

Mrs. Charles Smith and danghter, Lulu, will open up their residence on Bishop street. They have been spending the winter in Philadelphia and Reading.

Miss Helen Atherton, of State College, spent several hours in Bellefonte on Monday as the guest of the Misses Dorworth. She was on her way to Williamsport.

Miss Jennie Welsh, of Curwensville, who had been a guest for a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Furey, of near Bellefonte, left Thursday for Lock Haven to visit friends.

L. H. Neff, of Howard, who is one of our regular readers, several days ago very kindly advanced his subscription to "The Republican" another year. Here's showing our appreciation.

Ex-County Commissioner Merrill, of Lock Haven, was a caller at this office Tuesday with County Commissioner John Dunlap. He was here attending the funeral of Hon. J. C. Meyer.

Reuben Cronemiller, D. G. Daywalt, Wilson Ghaner and P. B. Farber, were among the delegation from Scotia to attend the funeral of the late J. C. Meyer on Tuesday afternoon.

It is with pleasure that we note that our new subscribers enrolled this week include Mrs. M. J. Morgan, of Altoona. Mrs. Morgan wanted all the Centre County news and adopted the best plan to get it.

With this issue "The Republican" becomes a regular weekly visitor to the homes of James McCloskey, and J. N. Smith, of Howard. We trust that each will find the paper both interesting and instructive.

Wilbur Twitmire, of Lancaster, was a visitor in Bellefonte over Sunday as a guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Twitmire. He recently located in that city as a dentist and is getting along nicely.

Ex-Commissioner Philip Meyer, of Centre Hall, was stricken with heart-failure at his home on Sunday afternoon. At first his case was considered quite serious but during the last couple of days he has been improving.

Irvin M. Schenck, whose home is near Howard, several days ago advanced his subscription to "The Republican" for another year, thus making the editor feel that his efforts to turn out a newsy paper are appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry English and daughter, Dorothy, of Pittsburg, spent a short time recently at the home of Mr. English's sister, Mrs. Furey, of near Bellefonte. In a short time Mr. and Mrs. English will sail for Europe.

Samuel B. Herr, D. F. McKean, J. N. Williams and Ray Scott, all of Monument, are new subscribers to "The Republican." We have every confidence that each family will find it to be the best and newsiest paper in Centre County.

Howard Moore, the progressive merchant and druggist, of Howard, passed through Bellefonte on Monday afternoon on his way to State College. Mr. Moore has for years been one of the prominent citizens of that community, always taking a deep interest in the progress of the town.

Charles Heichel, who resides near Howard and who is one of Centre County's sturdy citizens, was a genial caller at "The Republican" office a few days ago. Mr. Heichel called to become enrolled as a subscriber to this newspaper, thus insuring his getting all the news during the year to come.

Isaac Miller, well known here and who is rapidly becoming one of the big insurance men in Philadelphia, couldn't quite stand the pressure and came up to Bellefonte for a few hours trout fishing. The trout didn't treat him very kindly, for he succeeded in catching but one, although that was a dandy.

Charles W. Loveland, of Muncy, a brother of Ex-Sheriff H. D. Loveland, of Antes Fort, who is well known in Bellefonte, and an uncle of Mrs. S. M. Huff, of Milesburg, died in the Williamsport hospital Friday morning, aged 51 years. He formerly resided at Lamar and was well known through Nittany Valley.

A welcome and pleasant caller at our office a few days ago was Mrs. Daniel Weaver, of Lemont, who paid her respects and also became enrolled as a regular reader of "The Republican." During the year to come we shall endeavor to make "The Republican" so interesting that it will be a welcome visitor to the Weaver home.

William Daley, who for several years has been the efficient assistant in the Adams Express office, Bellefonte, has resigned and gone to Bordentown, N. J., where he has taken charge of an office for the same company. The route agent for that district is John Dubbs, formerly of Bellefonte, who will take care of "Billy" because he is a good, reliable young man who will do his best to succeed. His place here has been filled by Curtin Taylor, Jr., who is also P. D. G.

Harrisburg Automobile Co.

W. R. BLOUGH, Treasurer.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 30, 1911.

Messrs. Mead & Pittman, Gen'l Mgrs.,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sirs:

It gives me pleasure to note another instance in which your Company has lived up to its agreement, especially as it is a point upon which considerable doubt had been expressed. I refer to the fact that the Company pays a dividend in addition to the 20 per cent. guaranteed reduction given in your policies. I paid the third premium on the first policy which I took with you for $10,000, and which was due last December, and in addition to the regular guaranteed 20 per cent. reduction an annual dividend was applied to still further reduce the cost, that policy being taken upon the annual dividend plan

I do not know why the Royal Union can furnish insurance for such a low cost as compared to other companies, but the fact that they can and do is sufficient for me. If this statement is of advantage to you in getting business, you have my permission to use it. Yours truly,

GEO. G. McFARLAND,
President.
